RAIL CHIEF SLAIN IN DUEL

Today

It's Dark. Dawn Will Come.
Why the Red Howler?
Wicked, Wicked Russians.
The Fight Racket.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

WALL STREET was not happy yesterday. The price list carried "minus" signs thicker than leaves in the forest "when autumn hath blown."

Cotton and wheat went to the lowest prices for 1930, and corporation earnings for the third quarter of the year are expected to be the worst thus far.

However, when it is very dark, you may expect the dawn. The man who has most to fear is the one most easily frightened.

LAST SPRING, you may have seen, here, an entire column devoted to the proposition that government buying of wheat would help men that were building grain elevators on speculation, would add the wheat to "carry over" and blocking the market for winter wheat, cause prices to fall.

This prediction, based on facts quite plain, has unfortunately come true. The price of wheat yesterday was the lowest in 24 years.

SECRETARY LAMONT, head of the Department of Commerce, finds a bright spot in the low prices of raw goods. Big industries, taking advantage of low prices, purchase great quantities of materials.

In August the increase in our exports was more than is customary in that month, and the gain in retail trade at present is more than the normal gain for this season.

Perhaps we really are more frightened than hurt.

HERBERT SPENCER DICKEY saw in South America a tribe of "pale yellow" Indians named the Quaharibos. And they supplied information that, he hopes, will help him find a tribe of white Indians next year.

The yellow color is interesting, suggesting the alleged incoming of Indians from Asia.

Mr. Dickey brings back, among other interesting animals, a red howler monkey.

Why should a monkey be red, why should he howl? Was he made that way originally to amuse Adam and Eve? A red howling monkey must have been a welcome entertainment for a couple that had no movies, radio, talking machine or miniature golf links.

Science says natural selection decided the monkey's color. The red made him hard to see, among the tropical flowers. And he learned to howl, more and more wildly, as he discovered the howling kept away animals that would eat him.

MR. CYRUS H. K. CURTIS, who interests himself in everything from Peking to Peru and all around back to Philadelphia, discovers that the American prize fighting business is "a racket." He discovers ex-convicts "owning," controlling and exploiting the best known fighters. They "fix" the prize fights, and organize fouls, when that seems desirable.

However, why argue about prize fighting and its rackets?

Prize fighting is in a class with bull baiting, badger drawing, dog and cock fighting, only worse, and should go to join the others.

IN THE CAREER of Henry Phipps, who died yesterday, 91 years old, there is a moral for millions of young men. A great majority will not be interested in the moral, but here it is.

More than seventy years ago, Henry Phipps, young clerk in a hardware store in Ohio, sold powder to coal miners, other things to other people.

And when his work was done, he walked eight miles there and eight miles back to keep books for a blacksmith and iron worker unable to keep accounts.

THAT BLACKSMITH, with Carnegie and Phipps, went into the steel business. They prospered.

Phipps, undoubtedly, had business genius, as had Carnegie.

But, if Phipps had not been willing to walk eight miles there and back, to earn a few extra dollars a month, and get ahead in the world, he wouldn't have gone into business with Carnegie, and he would not now be leaving many millions to his children.

MR. HYDE, secretary of agriculture, says Russians do not tell the truth about their short wheat selling, that they sold twice as much as they admit selling.

Instead of selling 5,000,000 bushels, according to the secretary, they have sold 10,000,000 bushels.

It is wrong for Russian Communists to come to our great country and do what American citizens do every day, selling short or speculating for a rise in life's necessities.

But, even if Russia has sold 10,000,000 bushels of wheat in eight or nine months, that would not make much difference considering that the Chicago Board of Trade alone sells and buys fifty to sixty million bushels daily.

More important than Russia's wickedness is the fact of speculating in life's necessities.

If you speculate to increase the cost of bread in France, they put you in jail at hard labor. And they really PUT YOU IN JAIL, they do not merely talk about it.

GASOLINE PRICES are cut in Britain and Holland. Prices that automobile owners pay in Europe add one to your million reasons for being glad you live in America.

In Holland, as in France, they sell gasoline by the quart, not by the gallon. The price in Holland is now cut to 16 cents a quart. Imagine paying that.

No wonder Sir Henri Deterding, boss of the Big Dutch Oil Company, can afford to fight American oil men on their home grounds.

CRATER BODY BELIEVED FOUND

Taken From New York Bay, Answers Description Of Jurist Who Vanished

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—A body answering the description of Supreme Court Justice Joseph Force Crater in numerous details, including a mutilated right index finger, was recovered from the upper bay today and taken to a Staten Island morgue. Justice Crater has been missing since August 6.

Judge Crater

The body answered the description of the missing jurist in height and weight and seemed to be that of a man of about the judge's age. District Attorney Thomas C. T. Crain, who has been conducting a grand jury investigation of the disappearance, was immediately notified.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 23. — (INS.)— Sally Lou Ritz, showgirl of "Artists and Models," and one of the last persons to see Supreme Court Justice Joseph F. Crater, whose mysterious disappearance has rocked judicial circles in New York City, was located at the home of her parents here today.

Mrs. Lou Ritz, mother of the attractive 17-year-old dancer, admitted that Sally had returned to her home here after spending Saturday, Sunday and last evening in Pittsburgh.

The mother flatly refused to allow the girl to be interviewed. She said Sally would return to a show in Chicago within a few days.

Mrs. Ritz said that she and her husband had dinner with Judge Crater in a New York restaurant on the night he disappeared and that her daughter and William Klein, a theatrical agent, also were in the party.

She added with finality:

"It's absurd to think she knows anything about the disappearance of Judge Crater."

She said that Sally first met the jurist at the dinner party when her husband introduced the two.

WIFE TOO ILL TO QUIZ

AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 23.—County Attorney Southard indicated today he did not plan to place the Justice Crater case before the county grand jury. Because of the illness of Mrs. Crater he did not plan to question the jurist's wife.

Southard said he was convinced there was little tending to show Crater had met death in Maine, and he would not order dragging of bodies of water near the Crater summer home at Belgrade Lakes.

Mrs. Crater was reported so ill today that she could not submit to questioning.

VON ELM LEAD THREATENED BY JONES

Bobby Equals Par at Start Of Second Round; George Scores 70 for 143 Total

BULLETIN.

MERION CRICKET CLUB, ARDMORE, Pa., Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Bobby Jones, keeping up his sensational golfing pace, was out in 36, even par for his second qualifying round and still in front of the pack today in the national amateur championship. His total for 27 holes was 105.

MERION CRICKET CLUB, ARDMORE, Pa., Sept. 23. — (AP.) — Playing what he has announced as his amateur tournament swan song, George Von Elm, of Los Angeles, former champion, shot a brilliant 70, even par, today to assume the lead in the battle for the qualifying medal of the national amateur golf championship. He had a 36-hole two-day total of 143, one stroke short of the record.

Von Elm's score took the pace-setting role away from George T. Dunlap, Princeton star, who had set the early pace with 71-76—147.

It was posted as Bobby Jones, the first day's leader with 69, teed off for his second round and a bid to add the qualifying medal honors to his big bag of trophies for 1930.

DR. WILLING SECOND

Dr. O. F. Willing, of Portland, Ore., took second place temporarily by posting a 75, which with his first round of 70, gave him a total of 145, two strokes behind Von Elm.

Von Elm in rare form, shot birdies at the short 13th and 15th holes to cover the last nine in 33, under par. He three-putted the 16th, however, to cost him a chance to tally 69 for his round. His card:

JONES STARTS WELL

A great crowd lined the first fairway when Bobby Jones and Emery Stratton started their second round, spectators stretched along the line from tee to green. Bob hit a long tee shot and pitched 30 feet from the pin. The two putts gave him an easy par 4.

He hit another long drive at the second and then sent a brassie to a trap at the left of the green. He escaped easily from the sand and from 15 feet was down in two putts for a par 5.

Jones used a No. 2 iron from the tee at the 195-yard third and was 30 feet from the cup. He holed the downhill putt for a birdie 2 and went under par by a stroke for the three holes.

At the long fourth, 595 yards, Bob drove to a deep trap. He

HUSBAND KILLS WIFE, SELF IN HOME

Mt. Lebanon Pair Found Dead in Apartment After Being Missed for 2 Days

Murder and suicide was the opinion of Mt. Lebanon police today, after the bodies of David C. Manson, 53, and his wife, Helen, 22, were found today in their home, Apartment 23, at 44 Academy avenue, Mt. Lebanon.

Both had been shot. Mrs. Manson was found under bed coverings and the body of her husband stretched across the bed. Both were fully clothed. An automatic pistol was found nearby.

F. T. Goodwin, a close friend of the Mansons, asked John Mason, janitor of the building, to enter the Manson apartment, as he had not seen the couple for two days. The janitor found the bodies and notified police.

Police believe the crime may have been committed 48 fours before the discovery of the bodies.

NEAR EARLIER TRAGEDY

The scene of the double killing is only a few blocks from Rosemont avenue, where, on August 28, Frank M. Fish, 50, a sales executive, killed his wife, Adah, 49; his son, John, 19, and himself. Money trouble was given as the cause of the triple killing.

Janitor Mason said the couple frequently quarreled. Some time ago, Mason said, physical violence took place when dishes were hurled and the pair fought.

Mrs. Manson returned two weeks ago from a visit of two months with a sister in Grand Rapids, Mich. Since that time, Mason said, he had heard no quarreling.

PACKED VALISE

A packed valise belonging to Manson was found in the apartment. It contained, beside clothing, a passport indicating that Manson recently had visited Japan. A victory medal issued to World War soldiers who participated in the Argonne drive, also was found in the grip.

Deputy Coroner James L. Davidson and county detectives viewed the apartment and had the bodies removed to the morgue.

On the kitchen table in the Manson home were found a plate of bacon and eggs and on the floor a plate that had contained bacon. In the living room a rung on a windsor chair showed a fresh break.

The coroner's office said that Mrs. Manson had been shot twice and the husband once.

Col. Woodcock, John D. Pennington, dry administrator for the Pennsylvania-New Jersey-Delaware area, and Wilson conferred in the offices of the prohibition department in the Plaza Building, this morning and assembled for a further confab this afternoon.

Chicago Lauds Hearst's Patriotism and Invites Him to Be Guest of City

Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—A resolution inviting William Randolph Hearst to be the guest of Chicago, and directing the mayor to name a committee for his reception and entertainment was unanimously passed by the City Council yesterday.

The resolution referred to similar receptions given the eminent publisher by New York and Boston, following his return from Europe, where he was requested to leave France because of his work in exposing the secret Anglo-French naval treaty.

The resolution was introduced by Alderman Oscar F. Nelson, Republican floor leader in the Council, who declared:

"No American citizen has done more to safeguard freedom of press than Mr. Hearst, and no man has done more to keep the United States out of foreign entanglements.

"New York and Boston have clearly shown their feelings, and it is only right that Chicago — the greatest American city — should honor the man in a fitting manner."

The resolution was heartily seconded by Alderman John J. Kindl.

Alderman John S. Clark said:

"The action of France seems to be a direct slap at American institutions and American ideals. The French government seems to have forgotten that in the World War the Hearst

SHOOTS AIDE IN GUN FIGHT

Western Maryland President And Assistant Battle In Baltimore Office

BALTIMORE, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Maxwell C. Byers, president of the Western Maryland Railroad, was shot and killed and Dudley G. Gray, vice president of the road, seriously wounded in a pistol battle in the company's offices in the Standard Oil Building today. Both were former Pittsburghers.

The fatal shooting was discovered by occupants of neighboring offices in the building who entered after hearing several pistol shots. Mr. Byers and Mr. Gray both were on the floor, the former dead and the latter unconscious.

RUSHED TO HOSPITAL

Gray was rushed to a hospital and placed immediately on an operating table in an effort to save his life.

Police who were hastily summoned, said the two apparently had locked themselves in the office of the president and there "shot it out" over some difference.

The first patrolman on the scene, called by office employes who heard the shots, said he was forced to break down the door to gain entrance to the office of Mr. Byers.

The vice president was suffering from two bullet wounds in the back. The president had been shot twice, death apparently having been instantaneous.

An automatic pistol was found on the floor beside Gray with five shells exploded. Police said all doors into the executive's office were found locked.

At the hospital physicians said Gray had been shot once in the back and once in the chest. Byers' body bore three bullet wounds, police said, one through the heart.

Mr. Gray, 61 years old, came to Baltimore in 1914, one year after he became connected with the railroad. Previously he had started his railroad career with the Baltimore and Ohio after attending public schools in his native state, Ohio, and attending Ohio State University.

When he resigned from the service of the Baltimore and Ohio in 1913, Mr. Gray was general

Wales to Be God-Father To Baby Princess

LONDON, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—The Prince of Wales probably will be one of the god-fathers at the christening of the infant Princess Margaret Rose, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of York. Unofficial reports today said the Archbishop of Canterbury probably will perform the ceremony, which will be private.

The baby probably will wear her first ceremonial dress on this occasion, this being an old lace one used as successive royal christenings since the days of Queen Victoria. The Prince of Wales and other children of King George have been among the wearers, and the new baby's elder sister, Princess Elizabeth, also was baptized in it.

$1,000 Verdict for Golfer Hit in Mouth by Ball

Four little words spelling "fore" will cost Maurice A. Nernberg, 4001 Windsor street, attorney and handwriting expert, $1,000, if the verdict rendered by a jury today stands.

Leon Benjamin, Rowan avenue, sued for damages because he was hit by a golf ball driven by Nernberg on the Schenley Park links. The jury held that Nernberg's negligence in sounding the golf warning "fore" entitled Benjamin to $1,000 for the loss of four teeth and other injuries he said were due to a wild shot.

Benjamin said he was putting on No. 6 green when Nernberg drove from No. 7 tee. They parallel, and witnesses said Nernberg's "stance" (golf English for position when smacking the ball from the tee) was not calculated to send the pellet on a straight line for No. 7 green.

So Benjamin is $1,000 "up" on Nernberg, with the latter "one to go," which he indicated would be played in a retrial of the case if the court permits.

SENATOR NORRIS QUIZZES NAMESAKE ABOUT OPPOSITION

GROCER FOE SHIELDS MOTIVE

Attempted to Eliminate Me, Veteran Nebraskan Says; Nye and Witness Parry

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 23. (AP.)—The George W. Norrises—one a United States Senator, the other a grocer who aspired to the senatorship—had some words yesterday over the recent Nebraska primary election with Senator Nye, of North Dakota, an interested listener.

Senator Nye as chairman of the Senate campaign funds investigating committee is making inquiries into the primary to learn if the law were fully observed. He and Senator George W. Norris were both anxious to learn what prompted George W. Norris, formerly a grocer of Broken Bow, to file for the senatorial nomination.

Senator Nye did much of the interrogating of the former grocer, who now resides in Enid, Okla., but Senator Norris took it up when the North Dakotan finished.

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS

He first dug into the Oklahoma man's financial affairs, eliciting from him the information that he had not paid his attorney his fee for representing him before two tribunals seeking to establish the validity of the belated Norris Number Two's filing, which was subsequently ruled out, and then he delved into the motives back of that filing in the senatorial contest. Senator Norris queried:

"Just how can you say your filing in the senatorial contest was in good faith when both of us would have been erased from the picture if both names had been permitted to stay on the ballot?"

NORRIS AROUSED

To this his erstwhile opponent replied:

"I explained that this morning."

But this answer only aroused the veteran Senator to say:

"You didn't explain that this morning, and what's more you can't explain it—you only filed in an attempt to eliminate us both from the race."

Senator Nye and Grocer Norris parried words throughout the afternoon, but the former's ire crescended upon Victor Seymour, of Lincoln, now assistant to the chairman in charge of Republican affairs in western states with headquarters in Denver.

Throughout the day Seymour's name was injected by various witnesses as having engaged counsel for Norris No. 2 when his filing was opposed.

TRANSCRIPT READ

Quoting from transcript of the hearing in July, Senator Nye read into the record Seymour's testimony, denying emphatically any connection with the campaign or the second Norris filing.

With that in front of him, Senator Nye threatened "committee action" if other "altered stories" were presented to the committee.

Seymour, he stated, would not be summoned from Denver to discuss the purported conflicting stories of his association with the Senatorial contest, but added:

"He may have a chance to tell it to the Senate some time this winter."

ministrators. From here he will publication. Prior to conferring Woodcock said:

"I ordered Wilson to Wilmington for what I thought was the good of the service. Wilson apparently has not gone, and is on leave without pay. Wilson asked an opportunity to make an explanation and I will meet him today. Discipline is a necessary requisite of the service."

During his leave Wilson has been under subpena as a witness at the Federal District Court in session at Erie.

Col. Woodcock, who arrived in Pittsburgh this morning for an inspection tour of this district, expressed confidence that the national prohibition law can be enforced as other laws are enforced. It was his initial visit here.

After meeting the personnel of the local enforcement office Col. Woodcock made a brief address on enforcement methods.

GOING TO HARRISBURG

Col. Woodcock said he is making a general inspection tour of the country, and in addition to visits to the offices of the administrators, he will inspect the various 90-odd sub-offices of the ad- go to Harrisburg.

He said that after being appointed head of the prohibition enforcement department he had a conference with all his administrators at which he told of his ideas and policies for the enforcement work, and the purpose of his tour is to ascertain if these policies are being carried out.

He said:

"In order to enforce our prohibition policy honestly, earnestly and loyally, we must train our agents and personnel to a standard of efficiency and morale that they have never reached before.

SEEKS CO-OPERATION

"We must obtain cordial co-operation of state and city officials. The machine, trained as I have suggested, is being directed against commercial violators. I hope to have a bureau composed of agents who, in deportment, efficiency and lawfulness, shall not be eclipsed by any other group of men.

"I have visited New England and Ohio and part of Administrator Pennington's district and am well pleased with the administrators, their deputies and agents. I have found splendid co-operation with state and local authorities."

When asked if state and city officials in Pittsburgh were giving the desired co-operation, Col. Woodcock said he has not been here long enough to learn.

AFTER FINIELLO SLAYERS

While in Philadelphia yesterday, Woodcock acquainted himself with the progress of Commander Pennington's investigation into the killing of John G. Finiello, dry agent, in Elizabeth, N. J., last Friday. Finiello formerly was stationed in Pittsburgh.

The administrator declared the men involved in the killing of Finiello would be brought to justice at any cost.

While the administrator was in the city, John L. Liebert, Philadelphia, alleged brewmaster at the Rising Sun brewery, where Finiello was killed, was held in $25,000 bail on charges of illegal possession and manufacture of beer and maintaining a common nuisance. Commander Pennington said, after questioning Liebert, he had been exonerated of any connection with or knowledge of the killing of Finiello.

22 VOTE BOXES IMPOUNDED

After an investigation of the report submitted by the special recount board, a petition ordering the sheriff to impound 22 ballot boxes was granted today to Assistant District Attorney George F. P. Langfitt by Judge Frank P. Patterson in Common Pleas Court.

The impounded boxes of the May primaries will be examined by the district attorneys in an effort to learn whether or not election officials have been guilty of crime.

The boxes named were in the Second, Fourth and Ninth districts of the Second Ward; the First, Second, Fourth, Sixth, Twenty-first, Twenty-fifth and Thirty-third districts of the Fourth Ward; the First, Fourth, Fifth, Tenth, Twelfth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Seventeenth and Nineteenth districts of the Sixth Ward; the Twelfth district of the Twenty-second Ward; the Tenth District of the First Ward, Wilkinsburg, and the Fifth District of the Third Ward, Wilkinsburg.

Jug Explodes, Two Justices Showered

ST. C. Cowgill, Barnesville, who admits using for purchase of food $96.83 collected from renters of homes owned by D. C. Bolen, of Barnesville. No one was hurt although glass was thrown into an adjoining room. Employes of the county drafting room hastened into the place, attracted by noise of the explosion.

Coolidge Urges Action To Make Highways Safe

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Sept. 23.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

The waste that results from motor vehicle accidents in the United States has reached appalling proportions. During last year 31,000 persons were killed and 1,000,000 injured. This reads like the fatalities and casualties of a battlefield. A particularly discouraging feature was the ten and three-tenths per cent increase, which exceeds the increase in the number of registrations. Deaths have doubled since 1922. The economic loss is estimated at $850,000,000, which is $350,000,000 above the previous year.

Calvin Coolidge.

Many of the states and the nation at large have awakened to this terrible menace and are taking steps through investigations, commissions and conferences to meet it. Since, during this year, fatalities have not increased, some progress is indicated. Accidents to pedestrians and children have decreased.

The National Safety Council has reduced the accidental death rate in industry 30 per cent in 18 years. This same agency with all its allies is working on highway security. Some way must be found to curb recklessness and provide safeguards for operation. Elevated structures over railroads for through traffic are undoubtedly coming.

Every consideration of humanity and economics requires a solution of this pressing problem.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

BISHOP WARNS CANNON OF ILL FEELING

Cleric Told Sacrifice Is Needed; Church Body Likely to Hear Charges

International News Service.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 23.—Bishop Horace M. Dubose, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, today had made public the contents of a letter to Bishop James Cannon, Jr., in which he advised him that a "supreme official sacrifice" was necessary to satisfy resentment in the church against him.

The letter, copies of which were mailed August 18 to all bishops of the church, advised Bishop Cannon that feeling was strong in the church against him because of his stock market dealings as well as questions which arose during his questioning by the United States Senate in relation to the use of political funds in Virginia in the 1928 and 1930 campaigns.

EXPECT NEW QUIZ

As a result of charges by four elders of the church, Bishop Cannon is facing the second inquiry in five months in connection with his political life and reputed stock market activities.

The new charges, sent to Bishop William Ainsworth, at Birmingham, Ala., will probably result in an investigation at Charlotte, N. C., in December when the College of Bishops meet, according to Bishop Ainsworth. He refused to reveal the contents of the charges filed against the Washington (D. C.) clergyman. The letter read in part:

"I feel that I should be lacking loyalty to you and the Episcopacy and the church if I failed to advise you of the existence of the distressing feeling in the church.

SAILS WITH BRIDE

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Sept. 23.—(INS.)—With Bishop James Cannon, Jr., aboard as second-class passenger, the Munson liner American Legion was plowing toward the West Indies today, its arrival in New York scheduled for next Monday.

The bishop and his bride cut their honeymoon in South America two months short to rush back to the United States.

Mrs. Cannon at first was reported as not with her husband aboard the ship, but later it was discovered she had sailed under her former name, Helen MacCallum, giving her age as 42 and her occupation as "missionary." She was formerly the Bishop's secretary.

PETERHEAD, Scotland, Sept. 23.—(INS.)—Forty members of the crew of the British steamer City of Osaka were rescued by means of a breeches buoy today a few hours after the vessel went ashore on the rocky northeast coast of Scotland, six miles south of Buchan Ness, off Aberdeenshire.

The breeches buoy was catapulted to the vessel's deck by a lifeboat which put out to her assistance on receipt of an SOS. The remaining 40 members of the crew were expected to be rescued by the same means shortly.

The City of Osaka was bound for New York when she was driven ashore. There were no passengers aboard.

PLYMOUTH, Eng., Sept. 23.—(INS.)—The crew of the Antwerp steamer Ida, consisting of 12 men, was brought to safety by means of a breeches buoy today when the vessel went on the rocks off Prawle Point.

REED RETURNS, LAUDS HEARST

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—With a prayer of thanksgiving, former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, and Mrs. Reed have returned to the United States. They arrived last night on the North German Lloyd Bremen.

The couple, away since June 27, toured England, Scotland, Ireland, Italy, Germany, France and Switzerland by automobile. Reed said he was "mighty glad" he was living in the United States.

He was in Europe at the time of William Randolph Hearst's expulsion from France and had opportunity to observe the public reaction. He said:

"I found no one who did not agree that the French Government had done a silly, ridiculous act. Americans and Englishmen agreed that nothing more absurd had ever been done by the French government.

"It was universally said that Mr. Hearst's reply was not only humorous but extremely cutting."

Asked whether his hat was in the ring for president in 1932, Reed smiled and remarked that he was just a practicing lawyer.

Dope Investigator's Death Starts Quiz

MADRID, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—The foreign office today ordered the Spanish Embassy in Santiago, Chile, to investigate the cause of the death of Dr. Antonio Pagador, member of the League of Nations committee for suppression of drug traffic.

The government wants to learn whether Pagador, a Spanish subject, was poisoned by narcotic smugglers or whether he died from natural causes.

RAIL PRESIDENT DIES IN DUEL

freight agent of the company at Pittsburgh.

Mr. Byers, who was 52 years old, was elected president of the Western Maryland on March 1, 1929, and in 1926 he became also chairman of the board of directors.

He succeeded to the presidency when Carl R. Gray was elected president of the Union Pacific. He was then Gray's assistant.

OFFICER CUT

Police said that a railroad company officer, the first to seek entry into the executive office, had been seriously cut by broken glass when he sought to force the door, and was taken to a hospital. They hoped later to obtain some information from him as to the events before the shooting.

Officials also said they had learned that there had been differences between the president and vice president over certain litigation in which the railroad was involved.

The executive offices are on the fifth floor of the building, which is on the edge of the downtown section, on St. Paul street. The building and especially the railroad company's offices, which occupy several floors, swarmed with clerks and police officers shortly after the shooting.

Magistrate James P. Cadden hastened to the nearby Mercy Hospital, where Gray was taken, to be on hand for a deposition, but the vice president was too weak to talk.

The hospital attendants administered oxygen in an endeavor to restore him to greater consciousness. Meanwhile the magistrate waited by the bedside.

GRAY KNOWN HERE

Dudley Guy Gray, 61, was located in Pittsburgh as division freight agent of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company from 1905 to 1913. He lived at a downtown hotel. His home was at Columbus, O., where he entered the service of the B. & O. as a messenger boy in 1887. He was well known in local railroad circles. He resigned from the B. & O. to become vice president in charge of traffic of the Western Maryland. It was said today that for two years he and Byers had "been at loggerheads about matters in litigation involving the company."

PUPIL STRIKE HEARING TODAY

School Board Gives Parents 10 Minutes to Air Views On Obey Ave. Situation

President Marcus Aaron and his colleagues on the school board today will hear complaints of a parents' committee of students of the Obey avenue public school about conditions which prompted the children to go on a two-weeks' strike, with the blue skies as their only school room.

Aaron announced at a committee meeting yesterday that he had conferred with Elmer W. Gervin, chairman of a committee of parents, and had "severely censured them" for permitting their children to strike.

Aaron said:

"We will permit the committee 10 minutes to air their views on the situation. I believe that will be sufficient."

STRIKE OVER WALK

The strike was called more than two weeks ago because parents and pupils alike disliked the idea of the forced trek of almost a mile to the Schaeffer School. Their own school was closed in 1929. Outdoor classes were held for two weeks, but a compromise was effected and the children returned to classes September 15.

Committee members charged the Board of Education promised to consider their petition to have the Obey School reopened, but nothing ever came of it. They also declared taxpayers were not receiving fair treatment.

Approximately 25 children were enrolled at the school when it was closed. Most of the children on strike, according to Board of Education officials, were of kindergarten age and had never been enrolled at the Schaeffer School.

BOARD ADAMANT

Determination to end the strike was said to have been reached at a meeting of parents September 13, at which volunteer teachers recommended that the children return to regular classes, as requested by the school board pending today's hearing.

No intimation was forthcoming as to what the board's action today would be. During the continuance of the "blue sky" classes, the board refused them recognition.

PAYROLL AUTO HELD UP

suddenly drove abreast of him and forced him to the curb.

WAVES WEAPON

Before the coupe came to a stop a gunman leaped out, waving an automatic pistol. As he leaped on the running board of Braun's car he exclaimed:

"Give me that bag."

Braun, unarmed, reached for the bag on the seat and hurled it at the feet of the gunman. Braun explained later to Woods Run police that the tear gas bomb was so arranged that a jolt would release the gas.

When the bag fell to the ground the bomb released, and the fumes engulfed the gunman. He did not attempt to pick up the bag, but ran to his car and escaped down Beaver avenue.

After the bandit fled, Braun picked up his bag and made a report to Woods Run police.

Braun, in his report to police, said he believed the bandit had an accomplice in the car. He did not know the exact amount of money the bag contained, but said it contained between $4,000 and $5,000.

Police and detectives, armed with a description of the car, are scouring the downtown and North Side districts.

The highwayman was described by Braun as being young and tall and wearing a light gray cap.

It was reported to North Side police about 20 minutes after the attempted holdup that a man answering the gunman's description, and driving a green roadster, stole an automobile in Lacock street. The owner of the car saw the theft from a second story window of the house, but was unable to prevent the theft. The car was followed by a green roadster.

Atmosphere Here Better Than in N. Y. for Flying

Pittsburgh has less smoke and fog and better visibility for aviation purposes than New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Indianapolis.

Philadelphia is said to be worst of all, and weather forecaster W. S. Brotzman says he can prove his assertions as to the other cities.

These facts developed following a statement by George Hahn, president of Pittsburgh Aviation Industries, who contends Pittsburgh needs all the airports it can get on all sides of the city because of smoke and fog, to enable aviators to take advantage of wind directions.

And when the Mellon Institute is through with a present study of air polution, H. B. Meller, chief of the city's smoke bureau, contends it is likely that the smoke nuisance will be further decreased.

There are between 125,000 and 150,000 chimneys of all sizes in Pittsburgh, from the ordinary chimney on dwellings to the big stacks of the largest mills.

It is claimed more trouble is being caused by dust and cinders than smoke. It is the solution of this problem that is being sought.

Mr. Meller believes the time will come when supervision will be asked over residences. He has found that the use of gas or coke and to some extent smokeless coal has brought a decided improvement in smoke prevention.

As for aviation and its smoke problems, Mr. Brotzman says prevailing winds are from the southwest, west and northwest, and plenty of aviation fields on all sides of the city will prove of great advantage, and he said he subscribes to Mr. Hahn's statement.

CRIME CONTINUES RAPID INCREASE HERE

William Penn, Fort Pitt Hotels Go Into Hands of Receiver

SEPTEMBER SETS NEW RECORD

Auto Thefts Pass All-Time Mark for Single Month; Pickpockets Reap Harvest

The grip of crime, which in August was more ruthless than in any previous month in Pittsburgh's history, threatens to strangle law enforcement in the city, if the record for the first 23 days of September is maintained.

In that time, police report 123 crimes of major type, exclusive of the theft of 293 automobiles, this being an all-time record for the car stealing in a like period.

BURGLARS IN KNOXVILLE

Knoxville, which as a borough was peculiarly free from crime, has become the hot spot for housebreakers, 18 homes being entered and robbed in the past two weeks. Citizens of that district nightly are in terror of robbers, and nearly every home has been reinforced with strong bars and locks to fend off the gangsters who have worked with little fear of police interruption.

August established a new mark for murders, seven being committed within the city in that month. So far in September, the killers have taken only two lives, but crimes of lesser degree have shown a decided increase. The general average for murders in the city is five per month.

PICKPOCKETS ACTIVE

Pocketpicking is more prevalent now than at any time in several years, in spite of the recent order of Peter P. Walsh, superintendent of police, that all undesirables be rounded up and jailed or driven from the city. Plainclothesmen mingling with crowds on the streets and in business places, seem powerless to cope with the light-fingered fraternity and each day brings several reports of robbery from the person.

TRIO IN $30,000 FRAUD SOUGHT

City detectives today were seeking three swindlers here who obtained $30,000 from Samuel Spitzer, Chicago broker, by getting him to place a "sure thing bet" and then staging a fake police raid on their establishment.

Spitzer heard of Pittsburgh's "good thing" on horse races through a relative in Chicago, he told police, and he came here to meet men running the establishment.

He found them in an office in a Grant street building, on a door of which the name "F. R. Strauss, Broker," appeared, police said.

The office was equipped with a telegraph instrument, desks and oil paintings. The three men explained to him, Spitzer said, that they had a way of tapping telegraph wires, which enabled them to learn the winning horse's name and to place a bet without fear of losing.

Spitzer said he won several times, and then decided to bet the $30,000. But after he placed the bet, police said, two bogus police officers raided the place and Spitzer was advised to "beat it."

'Shot' Only Auto's Backfire, He Says

Harold J. O'Neil, 20, of 6564 Rowan street, was discharged in Central Police Court today after James Rubin, 5476 Avondale place, failed to prove that O'Neil fired a shot at his automobile in Negley avenue last night. O'Neil said the "shot" was produced when he tried to show a girl companion how loudly his automobile would backfire.

Fined For Tossing Pebbles at Windows

D. R. Tupper, of the Improvement of the Poor Home in Duquesne way, was fined $5 or five days in jail by Magistrate Thomas D. Jones in Central Police Court today.

Attaches at the Mayfair Hotel said Tupper was on the roof of the Improvement Building last night tossing pebbles at the Mayfair windows to attract women guests.

MERGER CASE NEARS END

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Barring, any unforeseen development, attorneys defending the merger of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company with the Bethlehem Steel Corporation probably will rest their case today or tomorrow.

The end of the long injunction suit hearing again seemed definitely in sight with the dismissal of three important witnesses yesterday. They were Cyrus E. Eaton, Cleveland financier, whose interests are seeking to enjoin the merger; W. B. Campbell, partner in Price, Waterhouse & Co., the merger auditors, and W. N. McDonald, Sheet and Tube comptroller.

BLAST WRECKS 2 HOUSES

With a flash and a roar that awakened the entire neighborhood, a mystery explosion early today wrecked the vacant brick house at 326 Horning street, Brentwood, and set fire to an adjoining frame dwelling, also unoccupied.

Houses in the vicinity were rocked as though by an earthquake, residents told police, although the blast did not break a window in nearby homes. Ignatz Zadinski, 5 Esther street, and Mr and Mrs. Charles Sigal, 7 Esther street, said they were thrown from their beds.

Firemen, arriving at the scene as George Beck, of 350 Horning avenue, sounded an alarm which brought two additional companies out, were handicapped because the nearest fire plug was 2,000 feet from the explosion, they said.

While hose was being laid from the plug on Stewart avenue to Esther street, and thence across lots to Horning street, the frame building was destroyed by fire.

Police were unable to fix the cause of the blast.

Wanted to Drive Star, Held in Theft

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 23.—(INS.)—Gus T. Fartely, who aspired to become a chauffeur for Leatrice Joy, film star, will be taken back to Philadelphia to stand trial of stealing an automobile, it was disclosed here today. Upon checking his past, police discovered Fartely was wanted in connection with the theft of an automobile from Mary E. Hartz, of Torrington, Conn.

Police Drag River For Bridge Leaper

Police were dragging the Monongahela river in the vicinity of the Twenty-second street bridge today for the body of an unidentified man reported to have jumped from the bridge. Seeing the man poised on the lower end of the bridge, John Chichwak, of 2430 Forbes street, reported to police that he ran towards him but that the man jumped into the river before Chichwak could reach him.

FIX ZUTA DEATH GUN OWNERSHIP

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—A gun used in the slaying of Jack Zuta, gangster, was traced by ballistics experts today to Danny Stanton, one of Chicago's 26 "public enemies."

The discovery of the ballistics experts, if accepted, cause police to abandon their original theory that Zuta was killed by members of the Moran-Aiello gang. Dapper Danny Stanton is generally aligned with the Al Capone faction.

Sixteen slugs were taken from Zuta's body and put under the ballistics experts' microscopes.

Stanton, at one time a gang leader in his own right, is at liberty under bond pending a hearing on vagrancy charges.

Moratorium on India Exchange Extended

BOMBAY, India, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—The government today approved a proposal to extend the moratorium on the Bombay stock exchange for three months, during which no speculative dealings will be permitted. The action was intended to prevent further bear raids and price collapses owing to the current trade depression and disturbed political situation.

Tribesmen on India Border Surrender

SIMLA, India, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—The Hajikhel and Hkwajak sections of the Chamkannis, hostile tribe on the Kurram border, Northwest frontier, have made a complete surrender of their arms, accompanied by hostages, to the government.

QUAKES ROCK EUREKA, CAL.

EUREKA, Cal., Sept. 23.—(AP.)—An earthquake of several seconds duration shook Eureka at 7:05 p. m. last night, toppling chimneys, spilling dishes off shelves and doing other minor damage.

Several slight shocks preceded the main quake. A number of small fires started when the chimneys crashed to earth, but those were extinguished with little damage.

Witnesses said the quakes were accompanied by a rumbling noise.

TONY BELL'S KIN FOUND DEAD

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 23.—Billy Berg, father-in-law of Tony Bell, who last week was acquitted of the murder of Constable John Donahoe, was found dead in Redstone Creek, in the rear of Fayette County Jail, at 11 o'clock today.

A slight cut over the left eye was the only mark of violence on the body. Berg was one of the chief alibi witnesses in the trial of Bell. His watch and money were found in his clothing.

Berg left the West End hotel at 10:50 last night which was the last he was seen alive. His watch had stopped at 11 o'clock last night. Berg's coat was found on the creek bank.

The body was first seen by passengers on a street car.

Berg testified at the Bell trial that Bell was at home the night of the Donahoe murder, which has proved the outstanding mystery of Fayette County's liquor ring.

Hoover to Address Bankers at Night

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23—(AP).—President Hoover is to make his address before the American Bankers' Association in Cleveland, October 2, at night instead of in the afternoon as tentatively arranged.

Mr. Hoover will leave October 1, and attend the world's series game in Philadelphia. He plans to remain there until that night before departing for Cleveland.

2-Continent Highway Route Inspected

PANAMA CITY, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—A party of engineers set out today to begin the first actual field reconaissance for the proposed highway to connect North and South American.

DEPRESSION IN BUSINESS BLAMED

Eppley Concerns Unable to Pay Interest on Bonds, Mortgages—Reorganizing

The William Penn and Fort Pitt Hotels went into the hands of receivers today.

A petition asking for the receivership was filed in Federal Court by Attorney Thomas M. Benner, representing the L. B. Herbst Corporation, of Chicago, one of the largest hotel supply houses in the country.

SOLVENT

The bill states that creditors would be jeopardized by the sale of the hotels, although the Pittsburgh Hotels Corporation is solvent, having $4,000,000 assets in excess of liabilities, but is unable at present to meet obligations.

Judge Robert M. Gibson named Eugene C. Eppley, president of the Eppley Hotels Company, and Attorney H. V. Blaxter, connected with the Harris theater interests, receivers for the Pittsburgh Hotels Corporation, owners of the two hotels.

DEPRESSION BLAMED

The receivership was acquiesced in by the board of directors of the coroporation.

The William Penn and Fort Pitt hotels have been under Eppley management since April, 1928.

Eppley said today:

"The business depression has hit the hotel business perhaps harder than any other business. This and other factors have brought about the necessity for refinancing."

The Eppley Hotels Company operates a chain of 21 hotels throughout the middle west and in Los Angeles. None of the company's other hotels is in any way affected by the local receivership, it was said.

DEFAULTED ON BONDS

The receivership followed action of a bondholders' protective committee for holders of bonds in the Pittsburgh Hotels Corporation headed by Prescott Lyon, investment banker.

Jannsen and Kocken, architects filed a mechanics lien against the corporation last week for $79,206.61, still due them as fes, they allege, in connection with the recently completed annex to the William Penn.

When Eppley took over control of the wto hotels it was reported the deal involved $17,000,000.

The company had defaulted in the payment of the last interest and its principal payment of $62,500 on its $1,650,000 second mortgage bonds and the $78,000 interest and $62,075 sinking fund payment on its $2,400,000 debenture bonds.

The hotels will continue operation under the present management and personell.

U. S. FLIERS IN REVOLT TOILS

SANTIAGO DE CHILE, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Two American aviators today were threatened with trial by court martial for their share in the attempted revolution Sunday against the administration of President Col. Carlos Ibanez.

Minister of Interior Carlos Froedden identified them as "Edward Orville de Larin" and "Reed Smith Doyle."

Froedden said they would be held, while their action in flying a plane to Concepcion and landing there of five persons who later attempted to initiate a rebellion was investigated.

The minister in his message reiterated that the country was calm and that the attempted revolt was a failure.

UNVEIL STATUE OF PENROSE

HARRISBURG, Sept. 3.—(AP.)—Less than nine years after Boies Penrose gave up in death his seat in the United States Senate and his place as undisputed leader of the Republican party of Pennsylvania, his native state paid him homage today in the dedication of a large bronze likeness of the senator.

Gov. Fisher, who as a member of the State Senate, helped elect Penrose to his second term in the Senate before the days of the direct primary, accepted the statue for the commonwealth. Senator Joseph R. Grundy, who acceded to the place in Congress held by Penrose after serving under his political tutelage, presided, and on every side were figures prominent in present day political life as well as the days of Penrose.

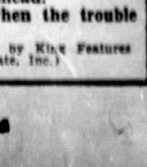
JESTER MINUTE BY ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER



President Hoover has gone back to the White House to resume his interrupted vacation.

His first job will be to separate Russian wheat from the chaff and both from the whiskers.

He will also lay plans for the sixth armament conference.

We have lost the first five conferences, which makes our diplomats something like Sir Thomas Lipton. He never wins.

But he loves the game and just goes along for the boat ride. If we lose this one that will make Sir Tommy one up on us.

There will be an inquiry into the post-office leasing scandal. It seems that every hollow tree is now a government post-office and every contractor a tree sitter.

He will also investigate miniature golf before outdoor sport is reduced to a bowl of rice and a big spoon.

Then the President will skeletonize our policy on war debts. A skeleton is something that is all bones.

We know we are never going to get those war debts. But we don't want them canceled.

Then there will be a big pow-wow on government economy for the next administration in case the Democrats happen to win.

It's the business of a president to look ahead.

FIREMEN IN BURNING RUINS OF FRAME HOUSE AT 324 HORNING STREET, CARICK, AFTER BLAST AND RESULTANT FIRE

Wife Opens Forbidden Box, Finds Divorce Decree

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Like Pandora, Mrs. Sylvia O. Jenks found trouble in a forbidden box.

Mrs. Jenks revealed her story in probate court yesterday when she obtained provisional letters of administration to the $60,000 estate of her husband, W. H. Jenks.

The widow said her husband once had shown her a strong box and warned her never to open it. His warning was:

"If you do, you will feel sorry."

After his death a woman who described herself as Jenks' fiancee came to Mrs. Jenks and asked for his effects. This aroused Mrs. Jenks curiosity, and she opened the strong box.

In it she found an envelope addressed "to my wife when she opens this box." The envelope contained a divorce decree granted to Jenks in Mexico a year before his death.

As a result of the discovery, his sister, Jane Tutle, of Ashtabula, O., sought letters of administration. Jenks left no will. The court ruled Mrs. Jenks would have to prove the divorce illegal in order to receive unconditional letters of administration.

The Superior Court here recently ruled Mexican divorces might be set aside in California courts if contested by either party.

COLLINS LAUDS OUTLOOK HERE AFTER VISIT

Democratic State Chairman Pleased With Situation; Hits G. O. P. Activities

John R. Collins, Democratic state chairman, here yesterday to confer with party leaders, said he was well satisfied with the political situation and that the Democratic candidates were in better shape than he had expected at this stage of the fight.

The Democratic ticket is headed by John Hemphill for governor, and Sedgwick Kistler for United States senator. They are opposing the Republican ticket headed by Gifford Pinchot for governor and Secretary of Labor James J. Davis for United States senator.

Collins said:

"Pinchot is slipping in the rural districts through his harping on building 20,000 miles of roads, which he knows he can't do.

"If 'Jim' Davis would pay as much attention to unemployment and the poor people of the state as he does to posing for pictures and running around in government airplanes, he might be able to furnish President Hoover more accurate statements on the number of unemployed than he has."

CALLS KISTLER EXPERT

Collins was asked why the Liberal party with an anti-dry platform, did not endorse Kistler together with Hemphill.

He replied:

"The Democrats did not urge Kistler. The Liberal party offered to indorse him, but we thought it would be better if they did not. We felt that Liberal party supporters might not want to vote for Kistler because he is not a high tariff man. On the other hand, he knows more and is better qualified to talk on the tariff than any man in the state.

"Our fight mainly is on the anti-dry issue and to give the people of the state an honest government."

DENIES REPORT

Concerning reports that William S. Vare and his associates on the Philadelphia War Board would support Hemphill against Pinchot, Collins declared:

"John Hemphill or any one in the party has made no pledge to win support from the War Board or has any knowledge of support from that source."

Collins' conferees yesterday included David L. Lawrence, chairman of the Democrat County Committee; Joseph P. Guffey, former Democrat national committeeman; Mrs. Anna Felix, Mrs. J. Wood Clark, Irving LaPorte and Charles Alvin Jones.

RALPH CRANMER — trailer-mansion in which they'll live this year while they attend Penn State.

STUDENTS LIVE IN AUTO HOME

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Sept. 23.—The turtle goes collegiate this year at Penn State College as two students settle down for the new year of study tomorrow in the home they took to school.

The turtles are James McKelvy, Manorville, and Ralph Cranmer, Monroetown, two lads working their way through college. They couldn't find the money to pay for their room at school this year, so they built themselves a home on an old trailer chassis.

Six and one-half feet by 12 feet, their shell has all the conveniences and essentials of larger quarters. Calculus, trigonometry, geometry and plain arithmetic went into working out dimensions and positions of folding beds, desks, chairs and what-not.

The woman came on the scene when a former co-ed at Penn State undertook to interior decorate the portable home in rusty orange, bright yellow, pale green and cream.

The homestead is in the woods on the north side of the campus. Portable whoopee is expected to result.

publications were loyal to the Allies, and loyal to France."

THE RESOLUTION

Mayor Thompson declared after the passage of the resolution that he would appoint the committee to handle the affair in the very near future. The resolution follows:

"Whereas, Mr. William Randolph Hearst, long recognized as one of the foremost Americans of our time, has returned to this country from a trip to Europe where he received in all but one country he visited signal honors due him because of his high position; and

"Whereas, because of his devotion to American principles and his service to this nation two years ago in publishing for the protection of his country a secret document revealing Anglo-French naval relations the French government recently requested him to leave France; and

"Whereas, the people of England, Germany and other countries manifested their disapproval of said action on the part of the French government and praised Mr. Hearst for the principles that he stood for—freedom of the press, devotion to the cause of his country and the enlightenment of the people on matters affecting their foreign relations; and

"Whereas, the citizens of New York and Boston, by public receptions and official resolutions, have demonstrated their enthusiastic approval of Mr. Hearst in his position regarding foreign entangling alliances and secret diplomatic treaties, pacts and agreements, and have evidenced in unmistakable terms their resentment of the act of the French government in expelling this distinguished American for the sole reason that he told the people of his country the truth about international matters vitally affecting them; and

"Whereas, Mr. Hearst, because of his devotion to American principles and his ever ready promptness and willingness, through his vast newspaper and magazine publications, to enlighten and warn the people in periods of national crises, has endeared himself to the American people; and

"Whereas, the Chicago City Council, representing the people of Chicago, desires to recognize the outstanding services of this great citizen and to demonstrate again their opposition to foreign entangling alliances and secret foreign pacts and to give renewed support to the cause of a free press published in the sole interest of America and Americans,

"Now, therefore be it resolved that the Chicago City Council, in behalf of the people of Chicago, hereby extend an invitation to Mr. William Randolph Hearst to be the official guest of the city of Chicago; and

"Be it further resolved that his honor, Mayor William Hale Thompson, be requested, empowered and authorized to transmit such invitation and to name a representative committee to receive and entertain Mr. Hearst upon such day as the committee may set for such entertainment and reception."

DEMAND DEATH IN RED PLOT

MOSCOW, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Hundreds of resolutions adopted at factory meetings throughout the country, and demanding the death sentence for all 25 members of the counter-revolutionary society revealed by the chief of police, were published in all the leading newspapers today.

The resolutions charged the society with attempting to starve the Soviet Union by destructively diminishing food reserves in the country.

Workers are liberally contributing to funds for construction of a huge Zeppelin to be named "Ogpu" after the secret police, who exposed the plot.

Murray, who is 26, was charged with permitting Terry to make the jump without taking proper precautions for his safety.

Young Pittsburgh Pianist Wins German Laurels

A group of Pittsburgh tourists, on their way home from the Passion Play, passed by Leipzig, and looking about for some musical recreation, happened to hear a public performance by a young Pittsburger, Henry Harris, who now is a student in the world-renowned conservatory of that city.

Henry Harris

That evening young Harris was playing the Liszt Piano Sonata, and they said that enthusiasm was so great after his playing he was recalled half a dozen times.

Henry Harris still is in his teens. Although born in Brooklyn, he has lived in Denniston avenue, Pittsburgh, since he was a baby. When he was 10 he attracted attention by his playing during parent-teacher meetings at Linden School. Afterwards, at Schenley High, he became general accompanist and soloist, played many times on KDKA radio programs and illustrated all musical lectures at various clubs given by his Pittsburgh teacher, J. Fred Lissfelt.

After graduation from Schenley, his father, John H. Harris, on one of his business tours to the Leipzig Fair, took the boy to Robert Teichmueller, who praised his ability.

During the past summer, Harris, accompanied his Pittsburgh teacher to all the European festivals, making the acquaintance of such great conductors as Damrosch, Bruno Walter and Franz Schalk, and such great teachers as Sevcik, Rosa Papier, and Bahr-Mildenburg.

Swinging the Ancient Churn Ages Ago In Asia Minor

The art of butter-making dates back to time immemorial, and reference to the use of butter as an article of food may be found chronicled long before the Christian Era—in fact, a very interesting volume concerning the history of the churn offers a multitude of quotations on butter-making by the Ancients as far back as 2000 B. C.

COUNCIL WEIGHS STREET FUND APPEALS

$97,500 Needed to Complete Irvine Avenue Project; Law Delays Ramp Plan

Council plans to hold a conference with the mayor and director of public works on the latter's request for $97,500 for the improvement of Greenfield and Second avenues.

The proposal will mark the completion of the widening and improvement of Irvine avenue.

Another ordinance proposing the expenditure of $49,800 for the paving of Frank street, Hazelwood, also will be the subject of a conference. Council decided today.

RAILROAD SPEEDS WORK

Asking early action on the ordinance, the department informed Council that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad rapidly is completing its work of raising tracks and other changes which, with the city's project, will eliminate a dangerous Hazelwood grade crossing. Due to the lateness of the season it is likely the project will not be completed until next year.

RAMP DELAYED

At the request of Assistant City Solicitor Thomas M. Benner, Council is marking time on the Horace street ramp project until legal objections are removed. This ramp, when completed, will enable inbound traffic on the Boulevard of the Allies to swing right down the ramp to the approach to the Liberty tubes. It is a joint county and city plan, the cost to the latter being about $200,000, according to present estimates. The legal objections arose out of court decisions adverse to the county's plans in the matter.

Another ordinance being considered by Council calls for the widening of a small portion of Perrysville avenue near Ivory street to aid in the completion of the Perry highway improvement. Property damages are estimated at $3,000. Another proposal calls for the widening of Allequippa street in the vicinity of Soho street to 40 feet, at a cost of $15,000, about $7,000 of which will be assessed against abutting property holders.

ASK SEWERS

The Department of Public Works has asked authority for two new large sewers. One is a storm sewer on Ottilia and St. Lucas streets, to cost Pittsburgh $6,930 and Mt. Oliver $2,070. The other asks $4,363 to pay the Pennsylvania Railroad for work on the Thirty-third street trunk sewer, done by agreement.

Stillman to Take Bride to Class At Harvard

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—James (Bud) Stillman, who chose a bride from the backwoods of Quebec, now plans to take her to school with him.

The son of the wealthy James A. Stillman, of New York, said his wife, the former Lena Wilson, of Grand Anse, Que., would attend some of his classes this fall at Harvard Medical School. Stillman is in his third year at Cambridge.

ADMITS PLANS FOR ROBBERY

Robert Hardesty, 23, of 20 East Robinson street, was held for further hearing by Magistrate Thomas D. Jones, in Central Police Court today, after being arrested on a suspicious person charge in a drug store at Sixth avenue and Wood street last night.

Policeman George Williams said Hardesty told him two men had stolen some of his clothing. As they talked, a bundle of clothing was laid at the drugstore door. Williams was released, but later arrested as he wandered about the streets.

He told the magistrate today that he and two other men had planned to rob the drug store and two downtown restaurants. The names of his accomplices were not learned by police.

The funeral was attended by members of the family and a few friends. D. William W. Fleetwood, pastor of the All Saints Episcopal Church, read the services.

Sully died Friday of a heart disease. His widow, Mrs. Emma F. Sully, his daughter, Mrs. Jack Whiting, first wife of Douglas Fairbanks, film actor, and his grandson, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., were at his bedside. He was 69.

HITLER ADVISES PEACE 'PUTSCH'

BERLIN, Sept. 23.—(INS)—An exposé of an alleged plot for the "peaceful penetration" of Germany by Fascism in place of any spectacular putsch was made today by the Red Flag, Communist organ.

In support of its startling claims, the newspaper published an alleged secret memorandum detailing in graphic manner the post-election plans of Adolf Hitler and his associates. In it Hitler is pictured as advising his Fascist leaders and "storm troops" to abandon all intentions for any sudden putsch, counseling them instead to concentrate all efforts on peaceful infiltration into public favor and a gradual assumption of the government.

Meanwhile, Chancellor Heinrich Bruening, beset on all sides by political clamor and dissension today launched into the task of attempting to restore Germany on a stable economic and parliamentary basis.

The appointment was announced by the Nationalist government at Nanking which since Chang's occupation of Peiping, northern capital, and his continual peaceful penetration of rebel territory on the heels of apparently friendly evacuating northern troops has jubilantly hailed the end of the civil war.

Nanking government officials already have announced plans for a political reorganization as well as formation of a new financial arrangement to be concluded at a conference with China's leading bankers and economists.

EXPLAIN NIGHT SCHOOL LOSS

A rise in standards of education in Pittsburgh is indicated by the decrease in registration at night elementary schools here, it is said.

Questioned as to reports that the decrease was attributed by the Board of Education to pupils being unable to afford the $1 returnable fee required as a deposit on books and evidence of good faith in attendance, school authorities today said the trend of need was toward high school education.

The shift to the high school is encouraging, they said. It is due to an increase in immigration and an increase in regular day school primary education.

A ruling of the board requires an attendance of at least 100 pupils at each night elementary school. Some buildings will be closed, it is thought, because of enrollment under this number. Students will be transferred to near-by schools.

Closing of the Manchester school, Juniata street, is seen as a result of low registration there.

Reports that the Morse school, the William H. McKelvey school, the Oliver High school and Washington school night elementary classes had been closed were denied, although it was stated that the buildings might be closed if registration did not increase. Nearby schools could take up those pupils who have enrolled.

GERM PLOT LAID TO GERMANS

THE HAGUE, Netherlands, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Robert Bonynge, counsel for the United States in the German-American Mixed Claims Tribunal, here today charged that German agents in the United States before America's entry into the European war engaged not only in arson and similar crimes, but in the spreading of disease germs imperiling human life.

The American insisted that Germany's contention that sabotage had been committed only on ships and not on land was abundantly refuted by the facts, and declared that it had been proved beyond question that the fire at the Kingsland (N. J.) munitions plant was caused by German agents.

Tomorrow the German representative will begin argument for his country.

Forward Ave. Site For City Dump Urged

The purchase of a Forward avenue site for a city dump has been urged on Council by Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang.

The site, seven and one-half acres, is priced at $10,000, he said. It is on the Forward avenue extension beyond Beechwood boulevard, Lang explained, and in a location where there will be no criticism. Opposition by women's organizations led to the abandonment of the Highland Park dump last spring.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Anton Kasper, a small shop keeper, is murdered while on a petting party. A mysterious person, signing himself "3-Z" writes to the newspapers admitting the crime. He tells of a second murder. Mac Ryerson, Kasper's companion, sticks steadfastly to her story of a man with "fish-eyes." Philip Armour is found murdered in a car near the scene of Kasper's death.

Now Go On With the Story

CHAPTER II

Captain Blake sprang to his feet. For a moment his gaze and Robin Dale's met and held. The letter was not a hoax.

"The city editor said he'd like to print these letters now. Don't you think it's best?"

"Sure, print 'em. Print everything about the case. We'll have to go wide open on this case. I'm afraid that's going to be our one chance for a tangible clue. There's something crazy about the whole affair. Jardin! Get Gordon and Ramsey. We're starting right over to Brooklyn."

Dale had gone to a telephone in the corner of the room and called Elbert Bailey. He made arrangements for the letters to be picked up and said he would send in the story from the scene of action.

"You'll be coming along, Dale?"

"It's that fer natin. I'd even walk to Brooklyn." Dale replied with a grin.

Once in the police car they settled back for the long drive.

"Sarge, how about a cigaret?"

"You're runnin' true to form, Dale," said Jardin, passing a package of cigarets. The sergeant looked upon it as a good omen when the reporter grubbed cigarets. How different from the early days of their association.

Perplexin' troubles go up in smoke, y'know, sarge."

There was very little else spoken during that trip.

Briar Road was a dead-end street which gave from Kings Highway. There were no houses on the street and it stopped abruptly at a truck farm which still flourished almost in the heart of the big city. The farmhouse, a ramshackle affair, was about a hundred yards to the north. The farm itself extended more than 200 yards south of Briar road. At its southern boundary it adjoined Kings Asylum for the Insane among others, many disabled war veterans.

Almost at the dead-end of Briar road was Philip Armour's coupe, guarded by the police. The body of the unfortunate victim was undisturbed. It was slouched down behind the steering wheel and the cause of death was quickly obvious. A bullet hole directly through the head. Death must have been instantaneous. The pockets of this victim had also been ransacked, but one thing had been left. It was a small notebook with a number of names and addresses. This book was immediately turned over to Jardin for a check-up.

On the floor of the coupe two squares of cardboard were found, apparently tickets of some sort. There were meaningless numbers of them although one proved to be of great interest. The identifying numerals on it were: 084-3-Z.

They look like stubs for a baseball pool or a racing pool," Capt. Blake remarked. "But look at that 3-Z."

"I hardly think your murderer is going about leaving his visiting cards, captain. I believe we'll learn the significance of that symbol before we're through."

About a hundred yards south of Briar road was another dead-end lane. It was named Carroll road. There were three frame cottages on it adjoining one another and facing north.

The crime it developed had been discovered by a young lad, Tim Scott. He resided in one of the three houses on Carroll road. Bicycling to the store early that morning he had been stopped by an unidentified man and told to go and look in the coupe which was parked as the police had found it. Frightened when he saw the body of a dead man he had pedaled frantically to the nearest police booth to report his discovery.

Dale accompanied Capt. Blake when he went to the Scott cottage to question the boy.

"What did the man look like, my boy," was one of the important points the police captain desired to settle.

"I didn't get a good look at him. See, he had his hat pulled down over his face. He was a little bigger'n I am, that's about five an' a half feet, an' he was skinny. His clothes was pretty rough, they wasn't pressed or anything but he didn't look like a workin' man because he had on a white shirt and wore a tie."

After leaving the Scott home Blake went next door. He questioned a Mrs. Verick there but so far as the previous night's tragedy was concerned, she could tell nothing.

The streets are full of them petting cars every night, so we don't pay any attention to them any more. But it's a shame the way they carry on. I think it's time the police did something about it."

Then, as far as you remember, you saw or heard nothing unusual last night, around 10 o'clock?"

No, I didn't, but why don't you go next door? That Mrs. Innes may be able to tell you something. She goes gallivantin' out every night while her husband's workin'. She's the kind who'd know about things like this. Go in and talk to her, but don't say I told you anything."

But you haven't really told us anything," Mrs. Verick suggested Dale with his most disarming smile.

I could if I wanted to. I've watched her goin' out nights, meetin' men they'd have cars parked somewhere around, an' sometimes she wouldn't get home before 2 or 3, but always in time to be there when her poor husband got home from workin' all night."

After they had left the Verick cottage and were walking to the next house Dale shook his head and remarked: "Funny, the things that go on and no one ever knows until something like this happens. I fear you'll get the low down on many poor humans before this case is over." Capt. Blake merely grunted. "It's all in a day's work, m'boy."

Mrs. Grace Innes proved to be quite young and extremely pretty. She was decidedly blonde, with large, dreamy blue eyes. Visibly agitated at the sight of the police, Capt. Blake had difficulty in getting any information whatever from her. It was not until Robin Dale interrupted with a question that anything of importance developed from the interview.

"Don't you think you'd better tell Capt. Blake just whom you meet at night?" She looked up with a frightened stare as Dale continued: "It's a serious matter, he's investigating—murder! If your affair is found to have no connection with it—why, I'm sure the matter won't go any further, do you understand?"

I can't tell you—I can't! What if my husband should ever find . . ." Please don't make me tell . . ." Finally, though, she admitted a clandestine affair with a Dr. Leo Hammel, of Bay Ridge, and Capt. Blake made a note to question the doctor.

When Blake and Dale returned to the scene of the crime they found the police commissioner himself on hand, taking personal charge of the case. Chief Inspector Byrd was with him. The papers had broken with the news of the affair and already feverish interest had been created. At this point a courier arrived with the information that Sergt. Jardin had found the girl who was Armour's companion when he was murdered. The girl was being held at the Jamaica station.

NATIONS AWAIT U. S. MOVE IN DOPE FIGHT

Lose Hope in League's Opium Bloc; See Relief in Pan-American Meeting

By KENNETH CLARK,
Universal Service.

For ten years the League of Nations has been dealing with the dope problem without any material beneficial results. Certain nations of Europe interested in the vast profits obtainable through the sale of narcotic drugs have blocked every effort for concerted action at Geneva.

The Hearst newspapers now propose a Pan-American conference on the subject. Such a move would enable the United States, acting collectively with the Pan-American countries, to force the League's proposed narcotic conference and dictate the terms of a convention to limit manufacture. The opium bloc would be unhorsed. Following is the first of four articles dealing with the growing problem.

GENEVA, Sept. 22. — The nations victimized by dope look today to the United States to lead them out of opium slavery. They have lost hope in the League of Nations.

Victim countries are those which, though not manufacturing drugs, are nevertheless flooded with the deadly poisons produced in manufacturing countries, chiefly in Europe, in quantities exceeding medical requirements.

The United States is a victim of this overmanufacture. Though America has enacted stringent domestic laws to control the dope traffic, tons of drugs continue to be smuggled into the United States each year.

Thousands of new addicts are created. Traffickers reap fabulous fortunes. American officials admit it is impossible for the United States, acting alone, to dam the flood. No matter how high the barriers are raised, dope leaks through. It is easy to conceal and transport.

SURPLUS MADE

The world's medicinal opium requirements are estimated at about 250 tons annually. The world's annual production is roughly 6,000 tons. Thus about 5,750 tons of dope each year go to debauch and kill innocent victims all over the world.

How staggering this figure is may be realized from the fact that the average medical dose of morphine is but one-sixth of a grain.

The overmanufacture in one year alone is stated to be sufficient to supply the world's legitimate needs for drugs for 20 years.

Every year's delay in ending this overmanufacture causes untold suffering and death. No nation is immune. In Egypt alone, government authorities report, 500,000 new addicts have been created since the league undertook to end the evil.

PROFIT ONLY GOAL

What has happened in Egypt has happened, on a greater or lesser scale, in other countries. Overmanufactured dope finds a market or it would not be made.

The dope gangs, whether they be governments or individuals, are not in the business for pleasure. They recognize but one god—profit.

During the past 10 years the league has supposedly been directing the international efforts to curb the evil. What is the result?

One result has been that under league leadership the fight against narcotics—the fight to save human lives from a plague that exacts a greater toll than any war or pestilence—has retreated.

That is why the victim countries, individually helpless before the avalanche, look appealingly to the United States and her sister nations of the Americas. They look to the United States, free of the influence of the league's opium bloc, to carry forward aggressively again the fight it led until the league "put on the brakes."

Courtesy Cards Allow Discount

HOUSTON, Sept. 23. — Texas Company, on September 19, issued official orders that all owners of courtesy cards be allowed 2 cents off on purchases of gasoline, making the price to cardholders 17 cents. Many of the companies here are placing pumps on the property of commercial users.

Wheat Price Drop Forces Bread Down

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(INS.)—Low levels in wheat prices today brought lower bread prices. Some stores announced a reduction in the price of 20-ounce loaves from eight to seven cents.

HARRY RICHMAN AND MUSICAL TRIP TO HAMBURG RADIO HIGHLIGHTS

The Loudspeaker

Accuracy in Sports, Clem McCarthy, Why Not McGraw? Russia My Weakness.

—By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Sept. 23—In selecting experts to comment on their sports broadcast, the radio magnificoes are giving more and more thought to the welcome note of accuracy.

Louis Reid

The American microphone men are obviously taking a leaf from the note-books of their brothers in England who, in the broadcasts of sports events, engage experts as commentators. Nothing like accuracy in experting for the British, y'know. For that matter, there's nothing like accuracy in experting for the Americans. If accuracy can be combined with a glow of excitement so much the better.

The Americans set out to achieve such a blend whereas the British regard a sports event as placidly as they do a soap-box orator in Hyde Park. The American system seems to me infinitely superior. It makes the under-stuffed armchair a little more inviting.

Sports Experts Now On Radio Payrolls

The broadcasters on this side have called in experts on yachting, experts on horse racing, experts on polo this summer. They also took care that palpitating announcers were close by to convey the atmosphere of enthusiasm, whether the atmosphere was present or not.

The result was contented ear-cuppers. And a contented ear-cupper is worth his weight in gold to the men behind the microphones.

The best experting achieved on the air waves this summer, it seems to me, has been that of Clem McCarthy, the turf authority. McCarthy knows his horses as the average announcer knows his jazz composers. His lore of stable gossip in colorful and comprehensive. He is not as rapid a talker as McNamee or Husing, nor is his voice musical, but he chooses his words well. His description is smooth and continuous, gathering speed and excitement as it nears its climax, as of course it should. Moreover, when he talks of Gallant Fox, he means Gallant Fox and not Whichone. With McCarthy, there's never a slip of the tongue.

The radio men have done a good job in the arena this year. They have had the benefit of experience. Their field glasses seem to be better adjusted. Rain and murk have not confused them. And they have gained accuracy without sacrificing excitement. It might be well for them to summon experts for the world series and the major football games and the pawings of the prize fighters.

McGraw Would Help Baseball Broadcasts

What of Ty Cobb or Master Mind McGraw as the dispensers of accuracy in the world series? Or as commentators of the strategy being employed? Or as narrators of the great stories of the diamond between innings? And could not the radio men find gratifying use of the football writers on the newspapers during the interminable pauses on the gridiron? Continuing the good work, they might conceivably call upon Dempsey or Corbett or Mr. James J. Tunney to help in the word-painting at the ringside.

Tenors are said to receive the greatest fan mail among all who assail the eardrums. Wonder how much fan mail is received by members of Hoover's administration? And by the senators and representatives who march so tirelessly to the microphones?

Since radio speaking has become an important part of their public life, many senators and representatives, my Potomac spies tell me, are finding visits to elocutionists and voice teachers more and more necessary. I wonder when they will find quite as necessary for radio purposes the drama and color of their word-wars on Capitol Hill? The play producers of Broadway might reimburse themselves by opening dramatic schools in Washington.

There comes a time in the life of every bass when without warning he gives off the song of the Volga Boatman just as there comes a time in the life of every soprano when without warning she gives off the Habanera from "Carmen."

Russian music invariably holds me to a chair, in case you're interested, longer than that of any other nationality.

Reinald Werrenrath conducts his periods on the air with his coat off and his shirt sleeves rolled up. Sartorial correctness won't reach the studios until television comes.

Radio Waves Filled With Gypsy Singers

Were all the Rumanian gypsies who have plunged into the radio waves collected in a pile they would fill the grounds of the royal palace at Bucharest.

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

Harry Richman, Clara Bow's boy friend, appears as guest artist on the RKO hour tonight. WCAE at 10:30. A musical travelogue through Hamburg, Germany, is the theme of W. K. Steiner's Grogan organ recital for KDKA fans at 9:30. Richard Arlen and other movie stars are to participate in the Paramount sketch offered WJAS listeners at 10:15. Sacred Songs at 7:30 on KDKA brings to the microphone A. K. Rowswell, humorist.

Jessica Dragonette sings the national anthem at city hall receptions in New York now, replacing opera singers.

If you have ambition to be an announcer, exercise Cesare Sodero's name on your tongue for a few minutes, then take Tschaikowsky for dessert.

Children exhibit less mike fright than grownups, says Louis Abels, conductor of the KQV children's hour.

John White, the "Lonesome Cowboy," has seen little of the West. He picked up most of his songs in New York—drugstores, perhaps.

A thousand dollars a week is no longer "big money" to network stars.

Dave Elman, Columbia continuity scribe, becomes frantic when anyone wishes him luck just before a new program goes on the air.

Facts about Jessica Dragonette, who will appear at the Pittsburgh Radio Show in Duquesne Garden next week:

Of all the radio artists featured today, Jessica Dragonette was the only one chosen to sing at the reception for the French fliers when they arrived in New York recently.

Jessica Dragonette is known as America's "Jenny Lind." Her one great wish was expressed in the phrase, "Let me sing in the homes of America."

Nora Bayes called her "The girl with the dimple in her throat."

Born in Calcutta, India, of American parents. At 6 she was entered as a pupil at Georgian Court at Lakewood, N. J. Here she learned French and music.

Selected by Max Reinhardt to sing the only solo in "The Miracle." Before 20 she was prima donna of "The Student Prince." Later was leading lady in "The Grand Street Follies."

Controlled or muffled?

THERE is the 7-check test for tone control. First, does it add vividness to entertainment, permitting you to hear any program exactly as rendered within the broadcast studio? In other words, has the set a control that enables you to regulate tone to its full value? When you turn the control to accentuate the bass, does it cut out the treble badly, causing speech to become muffled and unintelligible?

Exclusive Grebe Colortone emphasizes the high or low frequencies, as desired, to meet your preference. To determine how much it can add to your enjoyment of radio, hear Colortone in operation—then compare with sets featuring different methods of control. Ask your nearest Grebe dealer to demonstrate—and get a 7-check test list.

CHEAPER TO CAN NOW THAN BUY NEXT WINTER

Home-canning Pays Because Fruit and Pure Cane Sugar Are So Cheap Now

The abundance of luscious fruits in the market now, and pure cane sugar at an unheard-of low price, give every housewife the opportunity to put up a wide variety of preserves, jellies and jams at a most reasonable cost. With these home-canned delicacies on hand, the problem of next winter's fruit desserts can be most inexpensively solved.

From the viewpoint of health canned fruit, jellies and jams should appear daily in the winter diet. Canned fruits are rich in vitamins. Their flavor pleases the appetite, and their sugar content helps to balance the meal.

Aside from eating jelly or jam with bread or toast, they are a delicious accompaniment for roast meats and other dishes. And a spoonful used to top rice or bread puddings makes these nourishing desserts more taste-appealing.

As pure cane sugar plays an important part in preserving, so it is equally essential in the preparation of every-day meals. Pure cane sugar when used to season canned or fresh vegetables improves their flavor, thereby making them more enjoyable to the taste. Most foods are more delicious with pure cane sugar. MISS HARD-BOILED

By JANE DIXON

Raquel Goes to Paris and Jerry Follows

CHAPTER LX

Two days later Raquel and Greta were gliding smoothly along the Deauville road on their way back to Paris. Alphonse had gone on to Carlsbad.

Jerry Parker's farewell to Raquel was frankly regretful. The regret of a man who is being denied the company of an amusing and interesting companion.

With Bryce Watrous, he motored as far as the Inn of William the Conqueror, where the four had luncheon.

"Gosh," Greta confided to Raquel, when their car drew up to the ancient hostelry, "I forgot that darn kettle. Now I'll have to go to all the trouble to blast another one away from that frog custodian of the kitchens."

"You might tell Bryce you'd like one," suggested Raquel.

"No. I can't do that. He'd buy for me and then I'd miss all the fun."

"But you don't want a brass kettle."

"Of course I don't. I'll send it to Hattie. With her usual motherly thoughtfulness she'll see a big package and think I'm sending her a mink coat or something. When she unwraps that kettle she'll be fit to be tied."

The luncheon was rather giddy. Raquel thought. Banter was the prevailing note. No tinge of the sorrow of parting touched it. A fizz of fireworks that gave a fitting finish to a holiday celebration.

"I'll be seeing you again in Paris," Jerry said as their car started. "May stay on in Deauville for a few weeks longer."

Thinks of Eric

"Give us a ring," called Greta. "Bryce and I have a date to do a lot of damage along the boulevards."

"Well, that's the end of that," Greta said to Raquel as they rolled away. "A couple of good eggs. They'll miss us. What will the Casino do without 'em? Its nous' to give 'em a twirl and teach 'em what's what in clucks and suits." The Queen is dead. Long live the Queen."

"It's been a wonderful holiday," said Raquel.

"And how," exclaimed Greta. "Quiet, though, considering you were there. No duels. No dukes. No lady spies. How did you do it?"

"Greta, you're incorrigible."

"I can't deny it till you tell me what it is."

The remainder of the trip was made in comparative silence. Greta dozed. Raquel with passive mind and body watched the landscape unroll. Even the most satisfactory of holidays, she thought, must have their reactions.

She hoped Eric Stafford had left Paris. That he would make no attempt to see her again. She was sure he must have gone—to London probably. His sense of decency of fair play would have been so violated that he would avoid her as if she were a kind of plague.

The house in Neuilly was radiant to receive them.

Jerry Follows

"Gosh!" breathed Greta, scampering through the rooms to remark every vase of flowers, every evidence of the care that had been taken to make their arrival a joyous one. "Ain't it great to be home again?"

"Perfect." Raquel agreed, listlessly. The ride had tired her.

A night's rest and she threw herself feverishly into the maelstrom of work and pleasure at hand. She had to admit, though, that the buoyancy had gone out of her.

Was it because she was going home? She was going home, then, to her own land. She had decided. Was she really glad to vacate this throne of Beauty she had won in the Capital of Beauty? After all, it would be but a temporary abdication. She would return to take up her reign in a few months. Meanwhile, there was New York to be won. It was not as if she must go again into the dust, into the desert of her youth, back to Hermosa. She dismissed Hermosa and all it spelled with a shiver of dislike.

As if to give period to the gesture, the man in the black velvet coat came into the garden where she was resting to announce that she was wanted on the telephone.

The moment she heard the voice on the wire her heart gave a queer little spurt. As if it had ejected the sluggish stream that flowed through it and ran bright red again.

Jerry Parker? Would she dine with him tonight? Indeed she would. Then he'd be out early to pick her up. About 6 if that was all right. Fine! Six then.

Jerry's in town! she called to Greta with no attempt to conceal her joy in the news. He's coming to take me to dinner!

Where's Bryce? Greta asked.

I—I forgot to ask.

What a help you turn out to be. Not that it matters. I've got a date with a boy friend from Buenos Aires. And can he dance! I'll say.

Merry as Children

Raquel went about her toilette with a song, a haunting strain of a love song from a popular review on her lips.

What will mademoiselle wear? the chirrupy French maid asked.

Oh, I don't know. Anything. It doesn't matter.

The maid could not believe her own ears and looked it.

The greeting between Raquel and Jerry was perfunctory. Good friends meeting after a brief absence. She thought there was a tensity about him—an air of determination, an undercurrent of suppressed something she could not determine.

Strange that he should select Amethonville for this evening. It was the place she liked best in all Paris. And he had not even asked for her preference.

They were merry as two children at dinner. After all, there was something irresistible about an American jazz band. It made one want to sway and swing and be lost in some primitive jungle.

They danced. They hummed the music, not forgetting the words that were echoes of a broad street in a far-off jazz-mad city.

They pirouetted through a half dozen night clubs where frivolity was frothiest. It would soon be morning. Yet Jerry had made no mention of letting her go. His tensity had relaxed. He was a rollicking lad on a lark.

Questions Jerry

"How about breakfast?" he asked when they were exhausted from dancing. "There's a neat little place beyond St. Germaine. Quaint and off the beaten track. I can recommend their fresh milk, they milk while you wait—and the fraise des bois—wild strawberries."

"Wild strawberries." Raquel enthused. "I adore them."

They were off in the pearl-gray dawn. The rush of the morning breeze, purified from its journey over a refreshed earth, in their faces. The stir of that awakening earth in their hearts.

A buxom young peasant girl clattered her sabots along the garden path to meet them.

These funny people from Paris. Women with bare backs and bosoms. Men with the fronts cut from their black suits and stiff collars that cut into their necks were not new to the girl in the sabots. But that they should come away out here to eat berries and drink milk when they might be gorging excellent food in Paris, would never be aught except a miracle to her.

Raquel and Jerry were seated in a secluded spot in a pretty, rustic summer house with a thatched roof, its walls a tangle of flowering vines. They bantered and chatted airily while the girl set covers for two and brought them what they ordered. Discreetly she withdrew. Discretion on the part of French servants is a gift amounting to genius.

"How do you like my choice?" Jerry asked, indicating the pretty thatched nook and the corner of garden.

"It's too lovely," breathed Raquel. "But you haven't told me yet how you came to be in Paris."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Wednesday, September 24

The sidereal operations for this day seem to make for lively and intriguing conditions, with employment, new undertakings and those commercial enterprises devolving around publicity, promotion, printing and publishing under particularly progressive auspices. In the social, domestic and romantic affairs there may be an element of the singular or irregular or possibly of the highly idealistic or utopian.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a very lively and interesting year, with new ventures and fresh contracts and arrangements engaging the attention. All affairs relating to writings or publicity should flourish. Those in employment may enjoy some advancement, honors or favors from employers. The personal relations may assume some singular, ideal or peculiarly romantic angles.

A child born on this day may be particularly versatile and intellectual, although it may have some unusual or secretive angles to its personal character. It should do well with writings and in employment.

Angelic Voices and Faces Often a Wolf's Cloak, Fay King Tells Us

Some crooks are born with an ultra honest ring to their voices. It is a very valuable asset in their precarious careers.

They gain instant confidence by that sincere and earnest note. Folks who would not trust a reliable banker with a less "honest" tone, will raid the old sock and hand over a life's savings to the gifted swindler.

Some girls who are hardboiled little grafters are born with the most angelic and wistful expressions.

The more sordid their surroundings, the more flower-like they seem.

One can't help sympathizing with them in the face of the most cruel and calculated facts.

Good wives and mothers appear as villainesses compared to these doves with the instincts of a vulture.

Travelers' Early Breakfast Interrupted by Mystery Detective

Mrs. Hasbrouck's agitated query concerning the hurried footsteps outside in the hall needed no oral answer. Each one of us knew whose footsteps they were and I hoped that my face reflected the "poker" calmness of Lillian's instead of the panic-tinged excitement in Mary's young eyes.

"Open the door, Pa!" Mrs. Hasbrouck whispered, but her big husband shook his head, and we all sat motionless, breathless, until the footsteps stopped outside the door and a rap sounded upon the panels. Then Mr. Hasbrouck strode to the door and threw it open, revealing the figure of the man who had trailed us in the black roadster.

"Good morning," he said, his eyes going from one of us to the other with a scrutiny which was an inventory. That the detective was an unusually efficient person I knew and it was going to be a harder task than we had fancied this attempt to keep him from following us closely upon our homeward journey.

"Good morning!" Mr. Hasbrouck boomed, and I paid a quick mental tribute to his poise. There was no trace of astonishment in his manner, nothing but a quizzical query as to the unusual hour of the guest's arising.

"Did you smell the breakfast?" he asked with a broad companionable grin. "I tell Ma I could tell her coffee and bacon if I hadn't seen her for 40 years and was marooned on a desert island without knowing she was there with a camp fire."

"Get along with you, Egbert," his wife interrupted, playing up to his cue.

She gave an amused little laugh and turned to the man in the doorway.

"Would you like your breakfast now, too?" she asked pleasantly. "I can get it for you now just as well as not, or I can wait until the time you told me last night."

"Just a cup of coffee, please," the stocky man in the doorway replied. "I must have been crazy last night not to have had that car fixed and brought over here before I slept. I woke up about half an hour ago and remembered that there was something which I had forgotten to see to in New York. I've got to change my plans and go directly back there. And I want to get there before nine o'clock."

Mr. Hasbrouck's rejoinder was so prompt and plausibly encouraging that for a second I was dismayed. Then I caught his wife's eye and was suddenly reassured.

"There's no reason you can't," our host was saying, "provided you can get Miller to open up and give you your car. What time did he promise it, did you say?"

"I told you last night," the man rejoined impatiently. "Half-past seven."

"Well, the chances are that it's all ready for you. The next thing is to get Miller out at this hour of the morning. Tell you what I'll do. You sit down and get your breakfast, and I'll go over and see what luck I have in routing Miller out. Ma, make a place for him. Let's see, your name is Beaseley, I think you said, and these are Mrs. Underwood, Mrs. Graham and Miss Harrison. How about it, Mrs. Graham? Do you want me to help you start your car before I go, or will you wait until I come back?"

"Oh! I'm sure it will start easily enough," I said, feeling instinctively that it was the answer he wished. He patently did not want the newcomer to think his entrance would cause any haste in our getting away.

"I tell you I don't want anything but a cup of coffee," the man reiterated. "I'll go along with you up to the garage."

"All right," Mr. Hasbrouck agreed instantly. "Just as you say. Ma, pour him his coffee, and then come in here. I haven't fixed up Mrs. Graham's bill, but it won't take a minute."

From what I had seen of the Hasbrouck menage, I did not think the capable mistress of the house needed any aid or direction in making out a bill, and my pulses increased their tempo as she followed him into the other room after placing a cup of coffee and plate of muffins before the stocky man who had seated himself opposite me. As he lifted his coffee he spoke, looking directly at me.

"You're getting away early, too," he said and the words were a question which I answered volubly.

"Oh! yes, we want to get through New York by 8 o'clock, out on Long Island if possible. I dread traffic so."

I saw Mary's eyes widen then dance mischievously and was thankful that she had not giggled as she plainly wished. For she knows that I get a distinct thrill from piloting a car through crowded traffic.

"Out on Long Island, eh?" he said while Mary, Lillian and I raced through the remainder of our breakfast while attempting an appearance of slower tempo.

"Did you ever try the College Point ferry?"

Purposely I put on a startled air, as if I were confused at his words.

"The College Point ferry?" I repeated. "Yes, I've gone home that way, but today I have to go straight through to the city first, then over Queensborough Bridge."

Had he read what I wished him to glean from my words? I asked myself the question tensely as Mr. Hasbrouck and his wife came back to the dining room.

Household Hints

A chipped vase is easily mended. Take a small piece of putty and mold it into the cavity. Then take out the paint box and tint it the same shade as the vase. No one will be the wiser.

When washing your electric percolator never immerse it in water or you will ruin the heating element. Stand it on the drainboard and carefully wipe inside and out, leaving the spigot turned on so all parts are drained out. Scald finally inside with boiling water.

The Marry-Go-Round

Man's 'Ideal'—and the Girl He Marries

It would be a simple thing to please a man if only his theories and ideals were not so different from his habits and complexes.

Of course a man admires dignity and reserve in a woman, but the one he goes to see oftenest is less like a noble St. Bernard or a stately greyhound than like a playful fox-terrier puppy, who frisks gleefully around him and makes him feel WELCOME.

A man admires a capable woman who can mend his pockets, put up a wonderful picnic lunch, drive the car and paint the furniture—but he generally wakes up to find himself engaged to the girl who holds a match to his cigar with a little helpless white hand.

He admires a beautifully groomed woman, whose dress and apartment are always in perfect order; but when he wants to spend a restful evening, he seeks out some informal woman, who will let him lounge on her sofa cushions, and not be too particular about where he puts his boots, or his cigar ashes, or whether he musses her marcel.

* * *

He may admire a fearless, athletic woman, who can enjoy his sports with him, stand the rain, and tramp along beside him unwearied.

But, somehow, he always gets entangled with the delicate, frivolous little thing, who wears high heels and georgette crepe, asks foolish questions, doesn't listen to his answers, and "needs protection."

Every man admires honesty in a woman. Yet the one he spends his time and money on usually breaks her dates with sweet apologies, keeps him waiting—and guessing—and raises contrite eyes when he accuses her of flirting with another man.

A man admires modesty and simplicity in a woman, but the one he takes out on Saturday evenings wears revealing gowns and lip rouge and looks as though she MIGHT be kissed on the way home.

A man admires a brilliant and witty woman—but the one he takes to dinner is the kind who agrees with all his opinions, laughs at his feeblest joke and asks him to "tell it again."

* * *

Every man admires pride in a woman; but the one he goes BACK to is the woman who can smile and forgive when he offers a weak apology, who pretends to "understand," and who LISTENS to his explanations with an indulgent ear, and a tender, relenting eye.

Oh, yes, a man's IDEALS for woman are awfully high—but they are SO adjustable! What can a poor girl do!

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

A 'Forced' Situation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. A lady and gentleman are dining together, a friend of the lady comes in. Is it permissible for the lady to ask her friend to join them, or should this be left to the escort?

2. When a salad is served in a bowl (individual portions) should the salad be conveyed to the plate in small portions by using fork and large spoon?

3. Please tell me how a club sandwich should be eaten. Is it proper to cut the entire sandwich? This is usually very awkward on account of the thickness of the sandwich. T.

1. It is better form for neither one to ask the friend to join them at dinner. It is a "forced" situation and usually in bad taste. However, if there is some reason why the company of the third person is especially desired, the host, the gentleman, must extend the invitation.

2. Yes.

3. A club sandwich should be eaten with a knife and fork. Cut through the sandwich with the knife. If the layers of the sandwich make a difficult mouthful, take half at a time.

The Long Engagement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it correct to make a formal announcement of an engagement that will not culminate for two years?

2. When one's diamond engagement ring is so large as to make wearing the wedding ring on the same hand cumbersome, is it permissible to wear the wedding ring on the right hand? If not, how should they be worn? R. B.

1. This depends entirely on the wish of the bride-to-be, and her parents. There is no reason why the announcement should not be made if they wish to make it, and, under some circumstances, it is better to make this announcement.

2. Yes, this is permissible, but not in very good taste. Nowadays, when wedding rings can be such fashionably narrow bands, it would seem as if some arrangement or adaptation can be made so that the two rings can be worn on the same finger. To wear the engagement ring on a different finger gives the very distinct appearance of trying to over-emphasize one's possessions—a bit of "show-off."

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Are You One of Those Wives Whose Husband Refuses to Be a Companion to Her?

Suppose you'd been a Good Wife for years 'n' years—

Kept the house slick and shining . . . scrimped and saved . . . had your meals spang on the dot and the youngsters spotless—

And then suddenly discovered that you were sitting alone at home, night after night, while dad went "out to see a client."—How'd you feel?

Ella Hawkins knows how such a wife feels. That's the way she lived for eight, hard-working years. Dull? Of course it was dull. But she didn't expect it to be anything else. And if the dullness was reflected in herself . . . if she grew as drab and faded as her own well scrubbed floors, why she took it all as a matter of course. For Fred loved her. And she loved Fred. And barring accidents or death, nothing could happen to them.

But one day she woke to find that something was happening—and somehow that love upon which she had built was failing her. Fred "wasn't himself" any more. The old security was gone. And for the first time, terror came—Out of that terror she has written this cry.

"Dear Sally:

"Please advise me what to do. I am so terribly unhappy and frightened.

"I have been married for the last eight years, and we have two lovely children, a boy of 5 and a girl of 3. I am now 32 and my husband is 36.

"We are not wealthy, but we do manage to get along, and to save a little money each month. My husband is in the real estate business, and he does a little better each year. We have a nice home that I love to keep.

"We were so very happy until about 18 months ago. And even now, I don't know what has happened that we still aren't. My husband has always been fine to me, but he just doesn't seem interested in me any more. I am a good wife. I take splendid care of the children. I always have his meals ready promptly, have his laundry and clothes taken care of regularly, and keep myself, as well as our home, neat and clean.

"But lately I find myself alone all the time. After I get the babies tucked in bed I just sit and sit, and vainly wait for my husband to be a companion to me. He always says that he has clients to take care of in the evening, but I just can't help doubting that.

"When he does stay at home for the evening, he never thinks of paying any attention to me. He usually eats, reads his paper and then goes to bed, saying he has had a busy day and is tired.

"Oh, Sally! What's wrong? I love him and I love the babies and our home, and I am so worried and frightened. And sometimes I get so jealous of him, although I try to fight that. I'm sure there must be another woman he is interested in, or he wouldn't be like this.

"Please tell me what to do, and I'll do just as you say. I love him, and I want to get back our happy relationship, which somehow seems lost, and I don't know when or how we lost it.

"ELLA HAWKINS."

What has happened?

Well, not knowing either you or that husband of yours, my dear, I can't say for sure. But I suspect that your marriage is suffering from one of the commonest and most unnecessary complaints in the world . . plain boredom.

You see, Ella, there is much, much more to being a "good wife" than keeping yourself and your house and your babies neat . . or than having meals on time. You must be a companion, as well as a cook . . . and a playmate as well as a plodding partner.

You've forgotten that. In these busy years. They've been satisfactory years for you, for though you've had to work hard, you have been getting your heart's desire—a home for yourself and your babies.

He married you because you came like song and sunshine into his life. How much song and sunshine have you represented in these last eight years? How much fun has he found in this expensive job of home making—how much adventure?

Think of those things. For you may be sure he's thinking of them—and if you'll answer those questions honestly enough, it's dollars to doughnuts that you will find a solution for your difficulty.

And then what? How'll you win him back if he's just bored? Win him again as you won him the first time—by being song and sunshine—romance and adventure. Bring back the old sparkle and spunk! Learn again to jolly him and tell him what a grand guy he is. Get a facial and a marcel and a new dress—even though it cost $1.95, and go off on a picnic somewhere . . and when you go, leave the youngsters with some kindly neighbor and forget the housework. Give him back the girl he married—and then stay that girl!

And for the luvva Mike, cut out this "Other Woman" moan. Why jump to the conclusion that a man's chasing, just because he prefers a snappy hour with the fellows to a dull hour with the missis? Stupid jealousy like that will break up a home faster than a dozen vamps.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Disregarding Chills Often Dangerous

Many persons regard illness and disease far too lightly. Too many neglect a chill, a headache, utter weariness and even pain. Nothing is done because it does not seem convenient to give time to getting well.

DR COPELAND

Perhaps the most of us do not appreciate good health until we lose it. It is a mistake to spend too much time thinking about your state of health. But it is wise to heed nature's warning and quickly act when some indisposition attacks you.

Worry and hard work lower the vitality. Cold, exposure to the weather and fatigue are frequent causes of pleurisy.

It is a disease that usually accompanies pneumonia, or other attacks upon the lung tissue. It has a relationship to tuberculosis.

I tell you this so that you will realize the importance of the disease. It may be a warning to take the steps necessary for recovery from a pleurisy attack.

The disease is really an inflammation of the "pleura." This tissue is the membrane that covers the inside walls of the chest cavity. In this space are located the lungs and these, too, are covered by pleural tissue.

In an adult, when the attack is not a complication of some other disease, it begins with chilliness, fever, headache, and a bad pain in the side. It is a very sharp stabbing pain, running from front to back. It may take the form of a stitch in the side, following one or more of the nerves which run between the ribs. The doctor, with his ear to the chest, detects friction in breathing. There may be accumulation of fluid in the chest. If not, the symptoms will soon disappear.

While some attacks are painful, though not serious, there are others where the accumulation of fluid, or "effusion" is very great. This condition is a serious matter.

A most important factor in the treatment of the disease is quiet rest in bed. The doctor will see that the chest is bandaged or strapped so as to restrict the motion of the chest in breathing. This procedure will lessen the pain.

I want to make it very clear that pleurisy should not be neglected. If your doctor tells you that you have this condition and advises you to keep quiet, you should do exactly as he says. Help Nature all you can by assisting her in the process of getting well.

FINDS YELLOW INDIAN TRIBE

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Discovery of a tribe of "Yellow Indians" and new clues to the long-sought "White Indians" of the South American jungles were reported by Dr. Herbert Spencer Dickey, returning from a trek along the dark reaches of the Orinoco River.

Dr. Dickey, representing the Museum of the American Indian, Heye Foundation, returned on the liner Marabal with his wife and party of 11.

He said he had penetrated from 50 to 100 miles nearer the source of the Orinoco than other white men had yet gone. He stumbled upon a tribe called the "Quaharibos," distinguished chiefly for the yellowness of their skin, and they told him, he said, the "White Indians" would be found farther west. He plans to return.

LYLE OFFERED OLD DRY POST

SEATTLE, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Senator Wesley L. Jones has said that Roy C. Lyle, former Northwest prohibition administrator, acquitted of corruption and bribery charges, would be reinstated automatically in the federal prohibition enforcement service if he so desired.

Earl Corwin, another acquitted defendant, said he would demand immediate reinstatement as a dry agent.

Senator Jones said Lyle's position was governed by civil service rules and although the post he held no longer existed since enlargement of the Pacific Northwest division under the Department of Justice organization, he no doubt would receive equivalent rating.

Lyle said he has no immediate plans for the future.

Modern Furniture

You'll find more and more interest these days in modern furniture.

When you analyze it carefully, you can quickly see why people are beginning to recognize many of the improvements that have been in modern furniture in the past two years. They see it's less and less out of line with what they think furniture ought to be.

As you recall, when modern furniture first came to America it tended to follow the designs of many of the Viennese and other European artists. Some of this furniture was originally designed to go in large European houses and even in castles.

Sideboards were often as big as large motor cars. And they were so impractical for the average person as Babe Ruth's shoes would be to Marilyn Miller. They were too big for fashion comfort.

The bulky size and weight and clumsiness of a great deal of this modern furniture couldn't help but be of slow acceptance over here.

People are usually quite rational in the things they accept in fashion. And if a thing doesn't fit in, no matter how much they like it they pass it up until somebody has enough to make it so it will fit in with their scheme of things.

Now you'll notice this modern furniture is becoming smaller and smaller in size. It's becoming so that it's usable in smaller rooms and smaller homes. For instance there are new modern bedroom suites that will fit like a hand in a glove in a 9 by 12 bedroom.

And there are dining room suites that will fit in with what the real estate men call "breakfast rooms."

In addition to the substraction in size there has been a decided subtraction in the garishness of some of the smaller designs.

It has been perfectly natural that people have associated the word "modern" with design that is hectic and zig-zag and often quite strenuously cockeyed.

People haven't accepted these designs that can't help but disturb the average room and the average person in that room. They are accepting the sound adaptations of the modern idea.

And one important thing about the modern as we see it is its stark simplicity, its lack of gimcracks. Its arrangement so that it seems to fit.

As a matter of fact, much of the modern furniture being accepted shows rather closely some of the conventional period styles.

For instance, in some of the modern dining room furniture you'll find earmarks of Chippendale sticking out all over it. The modern living room furniture that is being accepted is not far removed from the conventional. The improvements that have been made have been toward further simplicity of line.

Fashion analysis of some of the most modern chairs will show they're often no more nor less than the so-called Cogswell chairs with a soft finish of beautifully grained woods to take the place of arms and legs. But in general contour they're Cogswell all over.

In making checks on modern furniture compared with other furniture you'll see this modern furniture is squeezing its way in—as most movements do—in small units, pieces rather than suites.

Modern lamps are in many homes that know their fashions. Modern draperies are in many good looking windows. Modern end tables book racks, coffee tables are belonging more and more in fashion.

People are finding more and more it isn't necessary to change the whole room to get a modern feeling in the room. Instead they're introducing this modern idea through the use of these modern tables and lamps and so on.

They're finding that if the modern things they choose are really modern and not "modernistic"—and really sound in themselves instead of being just novel and new and gaudy—that the result is a fashion-pleasing one.

N. Y. Candy Man Freed in Prague

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Leo Scharf, New York candy manufacturer, who was recently arrested here on charges of insulting the Czechoslovak state and assaulting a man in the street, was tried and, following favorable evidence, was permitted to leave the country.

Savings Banks Plan Capital Meet in '31

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(AP)—The executive committee of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks has decided to hold the next annual convention in Washington, D. C., next April or May.

2 BANKS YIELD THUGS $24,000

FARMERVILLE, La., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Three unmasked bandits entered the Farmerville State Bank through the back door, held employes at bay and escaped with money estimated at $20,000.

As one of the robbers held a gun on W. W. Porter, the cashier, and other employes, the others looted the vault and cash drawers systematically. They fled in an automobile.

A posse of citizens was organized and gave pursuit.

GRAFTON, Ill., Sept. 23.—(INS)—Two armed bandits held up the Grafton State Bank here and escaped with $4,000 in an automobile manned by a third bandit.

The money was all that was in the bank except for $100 which the bandits overlooked. It was said. It was insured.

CANADA PASSES TARIFF CODE

OTTAWA, Sept. 23.—(AP)—The House of Commons has approved the new tariff schedules which provide higher rates on more than 130 items.

The tariff bill was rushed through to enable Premier Bennett to sail today for the imperial conference in London. It was passed after the Premier had read into the records the guarantees of manufacturers that the higher dues would not lead to increased prices to the consumer.

Besides the tariff which is expected to provide jobs for 25,000 Canadians, two other pieces of major legislation were passed at the session: a bill to appropriate $20,000,000 to provide work and relief for the unemployed and a measure designed to prohibit dumping of both natural and manufactured products in Canada.

Parliament was adjourned to the boom of cannon and the flashing of military uniforms, in accordance with tradition. The session was called September 8 and was one of the shortest in Canada's history.

Consistent with its policy of laying the facts before the public, The American Tobacco Company has invited Mr. Philip D. Armour to review the reports of the distinguished men who have witnessed LUCKY STRIKE'S famous Toasting Process. The following is the statement of Mr. Armour:

"TODAY BUSINESS WORKS WITH SCIENCE"

Says

PHILIP D. ARMOUR

First Vice-President of Armour and Company

one of the world's largest meat packing concerns, a purveyor of food to millions. The name "Armour" in connection with food products is known for the highest possible quality wherever these products are sold.

"Science and business working together in the packing industry are constantly bringing rapid changes in methods and quality, all of which are to the lasting benefit of the public at large. Your employment of the benefits of the Ultra Violet Ray Process in the 'Toasting' of tobaccos for LUCKY STRIKE is an impressive example of how science can be utilized for the benefit of millions. It is in pace with the finest spirit and devotion to quality in American industry."

Philip D. Armour

LUCKY STRIKE—the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—THEN—"IT'S TOASTED." Everyone knows that heat purifies and so TOASTING removes harmful irritants that cause throat irritation and coughing. No wonder 20,679 physicians have stated LUCKIES to be less irritating! Everyone knows that sunshine mellows—that's why TOASTING includes the use of the Ultra Violet Ray.

"I have repeatedly warned my radio audience of a certain sickness which attacks 9 out of every 10 people at one time or another. It is a vicious sickness because it is the result of careless eating and living. It is called constipation, and while it usually appears only occasionally at first, so often is it neglected that it becomes a chronic and serious disease.

SPEED HEARING TO AID JOBLESS

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by WILLIAM PFARR

The jury for the International exhibition is in town today, and most of the interest centers around Henri Matisse, a distinguished and distinguished looking Frenchman. Matisse, who is an International winner, likes to leave France and come to America, for then he is away from his wife, who keeps him on a vegetable diet. In Pittsburgh he'll eat chicken. He likes cocktails, too, but whether he'll be able to satisfy this longing in Pittsburgh we don't know. If Matisse is as vain as most successful painters, he will spend much of the day gazing at the painting, "Moonrise, a Canadian Pastoral," which is owned by Carnegie Institute. He painted it.

Sir:

About your having to put two nickels in a pay 'phone, it may interest Mr. Bradford, of the telephone company, and your readers to learn of an experience whereby I was the innocent (?) beneficiary of what appears to be a new "racket." In chronicling the story, a reference to my present and past status might not hurt my feelings. I put in 10 years with Bill Wyman as telegrapher and editor of his financial news bureau, was later an "ornament" on the Press editorial staff, and for eight years I have been a Prudential insurance agent.

At the South Hills office of the Pittsburgh Railways I inserted a nickel in the prepayment booth telephone. My call was not completed. I heard a slight mechanical wheeze, but my nickel was not returned. I inserted another nickel and complained to the operator, but she insisted she had returned the coin. While waiting impatiently for the chief operator ! probed into the coin slot with my fingers. I felt what seemed a piece of stuffed cotton. My long fingers loosened the cotton and out came seven nice nickels. Knowing they were not the property of the telephone company and having no time to spare, I was base enough to pocket the nickels and go my way. Was I a slot machine racketeer?

JOHN F. DUFFY.

Explanation: Telephone-box thieves, who stuff the receptacles and return later to collect the returned nickels, are no rarity. We understand the telephone company is on their trail.

It happened the day after Burgess Turner, of Wilkinsburg, had been elected. The first case to be brought before him was that of a man charged with drunkenness. The prisoner happened to be an old friend of the Burgess. He was discharged. A few days later defendant and Burgess met on the street.

"You're a fine friend," the defendant criticized.

"Why, I discharged you, didn't I?" the Burgess argued. "What's the matter with that?"

"Lissen, Burgess," the defendant explained, "the only reason I got drunk was so's I'd be arrested and be the first prisoner in front o' you."

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

One of those P. T. Barnum Metropolitan Opera companies, "direct from New York City," is making its usual pilgrimage through the buckwheat belt, and stopped over in Frisco to send out the laundry and sing on a guarantee but not necessarily on key.

Then they are slumming by here to give our "music lovers for social sake" a chance to see fat, 50-year-old people make love to each other in an unintelligible tongue. Well, if you think rivalry is dead between these two art centers, read this in our morning sheets.

"All the opera singers are saving their best efforts for Los Angeles next week. They didn't cut loose in San Francisco at all last week."

Yours,
WILL.

Nomination Blank Mailed To Editor Will Bring Information Needed

Girls of Pittsburgh and vicinity would like to be awarded the free de luxe tour to Paris, which Gloria Swanson so generously offers, or one of the five free trips to Bermuda which the Sun-Telegraph is giving away, know details of the plan today. They received letters in the mail this morning disclosing the requirements and scores of them already are starting to work in hope of winning one of the tours.

There are just a few who did not get their blanks today. They, however, will get them in their mail tomorrow morning.

COUNCIL BUSY, NEEDS HELP

The city clerk will have to hire extra clerks to handle the work being done by Council.

Working at top speed to make up for time lost during the summer vacation, the law-makers yesterday passed 130 of the scores of ordinances presented last week.

Each one, to comply with obsolete laws, must be recorded in long hand within 10 days of passage.

An effort on the part of Councilman John S. Herron to hold back part of the flood proved futile yesterday when Councilman W. Y. English objected, saying:

"I want some pep put into Council."

Later he offered a resolution authorizing employment of additional help.

The councilmanic committees met this morning to get new work out of the way before the City-County golf tournament this afternoon.

SPEED VOTING MACHINE SUIT

Attorneys for the Poole Engineering and Manufacturing Company of Baltimore, awarded the $1,000,000 contract for supplying voting machines to Allegheny County, plan to file a motion before Judge Frank P. Patterson in Common Pleas Court Thursday to fix a prompt hearing on the pending injunction suit.

Attorney O. K. Eaton, who will appear as counsel for the Poole company with H. D. Hirsh, and County Solicitor M. B. Lesher, will meet tomorrow or Thursday to prepare the motion, Eaton stated.

The injunction suit, filed by Francis S. Guthrie against the county commissioners, Controller Robert O. Woodside and Treasurer John Francies last week, was not accompanied, as is customary, by a plea before the court for a preliminary injunction and the fixing of a date for a hearing.

Six-Acre Tract Offered to City

A site of approximately six acres adjoining Riverview Park have been offered to the city for $1 by C. D. Dyer, representing the estate of his father, Samuel Dyer. All of the taxes on the property, including 1930, have been paid. The property is on the west side of the park.

Police Catch Man In Officer's Auto

East End police today were holding Paul Everson, 29, of 332 South Winebiddle avenue, on a charge of having stolen an automobile owned by Luke Connors, retired East End police lieutenant. Everson was arrested in Bellevue by the borough police while riding in the auto, officials said, and was later turned over to city authorities.

$2,000 Fire Damages E. Pittsburgh Shop

Police today were investigating a fire which last night ruined the tailor shop of A. Prager, occupying a one-story frame building in 837 Linden avenue, East Pittsburgh. The blaze was believed due to an overheated gas stove, according to police, who estimated the damage at $2,000.

Council Scores Officials Submitting Auto Bills

Members of the Board of Adjustment have asked Council for $214.49, payment for the use of their own cars during the 13 weeks' taxi strike. Their bills met heavy fire in the Finance Committee today.

W. M. Jacoby, chairman, estimated his expenses at $3.50 per week. W. G. Rice said he made 12 trips, his expenses being $6 each. In addition he hit a fireplug, the damage costing him $15. He wants $87.

"We ought to send him a bill for the fire plug."

That was the comment of Councilman M. J. Muldowney.

Councilman R. J. Alderdice followed with:

"This request is outrageous. These are all highly paid men. They should not use taxicabs at the city's expense. They would use their own cars all the time. The doctors in the health department use their personal cars and get only 7½ cents a week for it."

The bills were referred to the law department.

Charles F. Miller and J. W. Cree, Jr., traveling together, asked $81.99. This includes an accident that cost them $39.74. The estimates of traveling expenses were approximate, their request said.

Discussing a New Book and the International

COUNT RENE D'HARNONCOURT — GLYN PHILPOT

MR. PHILPOT, MEMBER OF INTERNATIONAL EXHIBIT JURY, AND COUNT D'HARNONCOURT, WHOSE BOOK HAS BEEN RELEASED

FAMED ARTISTS CONVERSE HERE

By PENELOPE REDD.

Count Rene d'Harnoncourt and Glyn Philpot, famous English artist, talked quietly at breakfast in the Hotel Schenley of the fusion of work and social activities which make the three days' life of the Carnegie International jury hectic for all of its formality.

Penelope Redd

Rene d'Harnoncourt, however, never once intimated that he, too, was of the company of artists. He appeared only in his guise of interpreter for the non-English speaking members of the jury. Count d'Harnoncourt is likely to be much better known as an artist than any of the Carnegie prize winners that Philpot may assist in choosing.

For Rene d'Harnoncourt has produced the "Little Black Sambo" of Mexico in his book of Mexican pictures, "The Painted Pig."

Simultaneously with d'Harnoncourt's arrival in Pittsburgh, "The Painted Pig" appeared in those democratic exhibition galleries—the book stores.

The origin of the book was in Rene d'Harnoncourt's collection of Mexican toys. Mrs. Dwight Morrow—America's most famous mother-in-law—urged the versatile young Austrian to write a story about his collection of toys which had become renowned in Mexico.

Count d'Harnoncourt responded with his unerring charm by making irresistible pictures of his toys, and Mrs. Morrow, perforce, wrote the book.

Mrs. Morrow's young peon proteges, Rita and Pedro, who lived "between the smoking mountains and the cactus with red flowers," afford Count d'Harnoncourt the opportunity for producing pictures of Mexican folk ways in the children's quest of the pig "painted yellow with a tiny rosebud on his tail."

Elizabeth Morrow has infused her words with a gently ironic tinge that makes reading it aloud a double pleasure for the adult.

ALDERDICE PLAN GETS ACTION

Councilman Urges City Hire Labor for Winter Street Work, Not Contract it

A conference on a proposal advanced by Councilman Robert J. Alderdice to relieve unemployment in Pittsburgh will be arranged as quickly as possible by Councilman John S. Herron.

The former's plan, contained in a resolution introduced and passed unanimously by Council yesterday, would result in the city hiring men for street and sewer work this winter instead of letting the jobs to contractors.

EXPLAINS PLAN

Speaking in behalf of his resolution, Alderdice suggested that laborers be employed on four hour turns to permit as many as possible to secure some work. He also suggested that manual labor be used instead of machines. He said:

"Thousands are out of work and we can put a lot of men to work if we handle these projects through our own department of Public Works. We have a lot of ordinances for street and sewer jobs to consider and we have passed a good many of them. I think this plan could be worked out at a conference."

The conferees will be members of Council, Mayor Charles H. Kline, Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang, Controller James P. Kerr and City Solicitor Charles A. Wadschmidt.

FUNDS ASKED

Lang yesterday sent Council a request for the transfer of $52,500 for the payment of regular employes in the Bureau of Engineering for the rest of the year. The inability to use bond funds, and the need of increasing the force to meet the requirements of several contemplated projects were cited as reasons for the request.

KIRK, FUGITIVE, HELD IN TENN.

Detectives were to leave here today for Knoxville, Tenn., to bring back John Kirk, alleged holdup man and kidnaper, for whom police have been searching since New Year's Day, when Anthony Wisniewski, member of a bandit gang, was slain.

Kirk disappeared from the automobile in which the four bandits had started to hold up two roadhouses in the Beck's Run road, after Wisniewski's body was found slumped over the front seat, a bullet in his brain.

Police captured Joseph Dowling and Paul Smith two days later, implicated in the kidnaping of Betty Seifert, of the North Side. They later implicated Kirk.

Detectives expect to clear up the mystery of Wisniewski's death with Kirk's arrest. Dowling and Smith claimed the shooting was accidental. Kirk has waived extradition, police said.

New P. R. R. Bridge Nearing Completion

A new double-track bridge for the Pennsylvania Railroad crossing the Allegheny River at Oil City on the line between Buffalo and Pittsburgh, is nearing completion. The new bridge, costing more than $1,500,000, will replace the old single-track span, which will be removed.

LUCKY GIRL

BY HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Actions of Gordon Puzzle His Relatives

CHAPTER XXVI.

Cathie woke in the morning clear-eyed and refreshed. The workers stared when she came into the mess-hall for breakfast in a wool sweater and skirt of the same soft flower-blue as her eyes. Under the knitted tam her sunny hair curled and glittered around her small, laughing face. Beside her, Alfred Farnsworth had never looked so old. His eyes were puffy, and there was a grayish pallor over his usually healthy, florid face.

"It's a grand thing to be young. I can still remember!" Uncle Andrew Moore told her, smilingly, shaking his gaunt gray head from side to side.

"Ah, but age brings it's compensations," the blind woman said gently. "One wants so much less that one can't have. Andrew, are you seeing the guests have everything?"

Gordon Appears
Cathie Unable to Speak To Him

Gordon came in a little late. He, too, looked clear-eyed and fresh, but he had little to say. Cathie thought he looked tired, or sad, she couldn't decide which. She wondered if he had worried about last night. It was wrong, of course . . . still . . . just one kiss, if you never do it again . . . that isn't so very wicked, and oh, it helps so to know that you're loved. She wouldn't have had it otherwise . . . when she got a chance she'd tell him . . . then he'd stop worrying . . .

There was no opportunity to speak to him after breakfast. He left directly with Farnsworth and the other brother, David.

With the blind aunt Cathie visited the kitchen, saw the great ranges, the huge refrigerators, and the crew of men who peeled potatoes, scraped carrots, opened cans of asparagus and tomatoes.

"Everything's immaculate," the little old lady said complacently. It was, but how, Cathie wondered, did she know it?

It was a thrill to listen to the whistle that announced lunch; to see the men, some splattered with cement, some wet to the tops of their high boots, filing in to eat. To see the platters of fried potatoes, sliced meat and heaped up vegetables melt away. Everybody was hungry, and everybody enjoyed the food that the blind woman provided.

Cathie Happy
Becomes More Beautiful In Mountains

The Moore Brothers kept workers over years, workers who went with them from project to project, and the silvery-haired old blind aunt went with them always, facing the cold mountain winters, the hot desert summers with equal blandness, never complaining, never looking hot or cold or tired or dirty, never seeing, and yet seeing all.

She even directed the placing of a few hardy flowers and shrubs around the house, and a fine patch of clover in front of the guest house was proudly referred to as "the lawn." "It makes such a difference how things look," she said. She, who couldn't see at all.

The three days that Farnsworth could spare from the office passed all too quickly for Cathie. She was glowing and vibrant with happiness. Her skin, always clear and satiny, had become incredibly beautiful. There was a faint opalescent sheen to it. It seemed too delicate even to touch, like the petal of a flower. Her eyes were dark blue wells of happiness, and their thick, curled back, sunny lashes gave them a laughing look.

The younger engineers found excuses to hang around the camp. In the bunkhouses they talked about her, joked a bit at Farnsworth's expense. How long would an old codger like that keep such a pretty young wife?

"This is certainly doing you a world of good," Farnsworth told her. "You're a different girl—a different girl."

Shattered Plans
Gordon Missing When Visitors Leave

Cathie lifted honest blue eyes to her husband's. "I am," she said. "I'm going to be a much nicer person than I was before I came to the mountains."

Farnsworth smiled rather sadly.

"You were always nice, my dear."

"Then I'll be nicer!"

The queer part was that she meant it.

"It's because I'm in love," she thought, happily, 'and it can't be so wicked to love someone, when it makes you really want to be kinder to everyone else . . . especially when I never see Gordon. . . . I probably won't see him alone again till we go. . . ."

She planned that meeting . . . the sweet goodbye, his hand in hers. And would it be very wrong to kiss him just once more? When it was goodbye? She decided it wouldn't be. . . . Poor Cathie! When the day came there was leave-taking enough—all the Moores but Gordon lined up to speed them on their way. Gordon wasn't there. He had left before daylight, on a trip of his own.

Midget Golf, Bowling Alley Tax Plan Approved

The Finance Committee of Council today affirmed unanimously an ordinance taxing miniature golf courses, indoor and outdoor, $1.66⅔ per hole per month.

The ordinance, drawn by the Law Department, fixes the tax at $15 a month for each nine holes, as compared with $10 a month amusement tax now paid regardless of the size of the course.

The same ordinance taxes bowling alleys $2.50 per alley per month. They are not paying any city tax at present although pool rooms pay. Another ordinance gave the Board of Adjustment power to permit indoor and outdoor golf courses in residential districts, the permit being limited to one year.

Held for Alleged U. S. Loan Forgery

Thomas H. Banks, 35, Negro, of Boone way, accused of forging the name of Richard P. Turner in an application to the United States Veterans Bureau for a $40 loan, using an adjusted service certificate of the latter to establish identification, was held for court by the United States Commissioner. Banks was arrested by United States secret service operatives.

CITY TO SELL EXCESS LAND

City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley, Controller J. P. Kerr and Chief Assessor Thomas McMahon have been named a committee to survey and sell unneeded city property. The committee was named by President of Council John S. Herron at the request of the Bureau of Governmental Research.

Schooley, told of the appointment, said that the first step should be a thorough survey, declaring:

"No one seems to know just what the property owned by the city consists of. There may be some lots that, with a comparatively inexpensive retaining wall and some filling, can be sold for good prices. I don't know if there are any of that kind. No one else seems to know. With some inexpensive improvements some of this property possibly can be sold at a price to bring some real money into the treasury."

TRAFFIC RULES GIVEN PUPILS

The Better Traffic Committee has distributed a set of safety rules in the form of a pledge to pupils in public and parochial schools as a feature of the fourth annual traffic essay contest sponsored by the committee.

The rules embrace instructions for persons crossing streets where traffic is heavy.

Chamber to Push Civic Improvement

The Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce today was considering its vigorous policy for the 1930-31 season.

Pledged to utilize every resource of the chamber towards fulfillment of the projects outlined by President James Rae before 400 members, the rail-river terminals plan caused much comment.

RAE SEES RIVER AID, BIG NEED

Development of river commerce here was listed among the important objectives of the Chamber of Commerce, by its president, James Rae, in an address before 500 members at the chamber's first meeting of the 1930-31 season yesterday.

Before opening the meeting, Rae called upon the audience to stand a moment in silence as a tribute to William H. Stevenson, past president and active member of the chamber, who died yesterday.

George C. Crawford, new president of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, was guest of honor. He made a brief address.

Rae said the chamber will concentrate on several important projects, utilizing every resource of the organization to bring about consummation of developments now needed to accentuate commerce and industry here.

CONSIDER PLAN FOR AIR TOUR

Completion of plans for the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce air tour to advertise Pittsburgh and stimulate local interest in aviation will take place today at a meeting of the chamber's aeronautics committee. Raymond M. Marlier, chairman of the committee, will preside. An itinerary, beginning October 14 and ending two days later in Pittsburgh, which was planned after the committee's last meeting, will be submitted for approval.

Hearing on Zoning Change Scheduled

A proposal to change the zoning at Ridge and Galveston avenues from residential to commercial will be the subject of a public hearing before Council one week from Wednesday. The necessary ordinance was held over yesterday.

JEWS OBSERVE NEW YEAR

Gathering in provender from Logan st, shops to celebrate the feast of "Jewish New Year"

The world was in its 5,691st year today, according to the ancient Hebrew calendar.

Organized Jewry throughout the world last night began the observance of "Rosh Hashonah," the feast of the New Year. The ceremonies will last until Wednesday for Orthodox Hebrews and will end tonight for the Reformed Jewish Church.

In Pittsburgh's synagogues today the Shofar, or Ram's Horn, was sounded as a reminder to man of the meaning of the day, or man's obligations to his fellow man and of his duties to his God.

The significance of "Rosh Hashonah" is explained in the following statement from the Central Conferences of American Rabbis:

"With the coming of the modern era in Jewish life, the idea of the festival of New Year as a day of judgment has been developed greatly. The new year came to stand as a day of self-examination, self-criticism and self-judgment—an idea which permeates the prayer book of Judaism today. On this day, every human being is to search the inner recesses of his past life, criticize his actions and deeds of the past year and make sincere resolution before God to turn from all misdeeds in years to come."

Worried
Blind Aunt Wonders About Gordon

"Who? Mrs. Farnsworth? Umph. Yes, you'd call her pretty. A blonde. Blue eyes."

"I had that in mind. Does she shine, David? Is there a shimmering in her hair, and a—"

"Damn it all, I said she was pretty!" cried David, the woman-hater, edging away.

The blind woman stood still, smiling gently. "Strange Gordon didn't stay around more. He was always the one with the liking for the ladies. Not like David. I remember how he danced attendance on the Willoughby girl. She must have been very pretty, too."

"But different, Maudie," her brother put in. "A pretty woman, and you've said it. Now this other one, this Mrs. Farnsworth . . . she'd be hard to forget. A man likes to look at her, and to talk to her, too."

"And Gordon had no time for her?"

David Moore pulled his hat over his eyes, in the gesture so much like his younger brother's. "Gordon's no fool," he said bluntly. "The girl's married. Besides, he is not one to lose his head over a woman. The Willoughby and the others . . . what did they mean? Nothing!"

Miss Maudie Moore nodded her silvery head. "I was just asking," he said. "You forget sometimes, my dears, that there's no sight in my eyes. So I must ask questions."

"Precious few you ask," her brother said, before he went back to his box-like office at the end of the building.

He did not go to work immediately. He filled a pipe, and lit it slowly, looking past his littered desk, into space.

"Maudie's worried about Gordon," he thought. She thinks there's an attraction between him and Farnsworth's wife . . . Maudie sees so much more than the rest of us . . . never knew her to be wrong . . . Farnsworth looked pretty glum . . . Pshaw, I'm not going to worry. I'd trust the boy."

The whistles blew. On the dam a new shift went to work. Old Andrew Moore still sat at his desk, looking into space.

Laurel Gardens Firemen Plan, Build Own Home

The Laurel Gardens Volunteer Fire Department, Inc., of Ross township, tired of paying rent for an engine house, has banded together to build its own headquarters building.

Already the concrete block foundation for the building, a one-story affair, with a basement, has been finished. The structure will cost about $2,200 when it is completed, it was said.

When the idea was started, members of the department found they had enough bricklayers and carpenters, to work out the plan prepared by J. W. Johnston, a member of the township board of commissioners, and the president of the fire department.

All of the material, and the land itself, was given the department at cost. The debt incurred by the project will be paid off with proceeds from dances and entertainments to be held in the place.

Other officers of the department include C. E. Pafenbach, vice president; J. J. Schaefnocker, secretary; D. W. Scott, treasurer; W. A. Steward, chief, and A. J. Hall, assistant chief.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Society Folk Attend Opening Night of Shaw's 'Apple Cart'

After the long drought of the eventless summer, it's downright rejuvenating, isn't it, for everything to be starting up again from weddings and debuts to theatrical openings?

Last night society folks arrived at the Nixon for the opening Theater Guild production of the season, Bernard Shaw's delightful "Apple Cart."

As the audience was leaving last night I chuckled a bit with one of the lines in the play that everything was becoming so standardized that folks were as much alike as hotel dinners. For the women didn't look much alike with their infinite variety of gowns, longer and more truly graceful than last season. And wraps were quite as diverting as gowns, some were perky jackets and some were formal long wraps.

Mrs. Alan Magee Scaife, the former Sara Mellon, wore a smart jacket of black velvet fashioned with short sleeves and a miniature swallow tail edged with a circular ruffle of the same material. Her gown was of exquisite lace having a tiny rosebud motif in black as the only pattern. And her slippers were of gayly flowered black crepe. She and Mr. Scaife I saw chatting during the first intermission with Genevieve Bell and Mrs. Alexander L. Robinson. Genevieve looked stunning in a delicate yellow crepe dress with touches of lace at the decolletage and a dandelion velvet evening wrap. Mrs. Robinson chose a smartly simple gown of white crepe.

Velvet Popular

The Robert Sean Green Annans back from their wedding trip were there and in their party I saw their sister, Helen Leovy. I hardly need mention that Mrs. Annan was Elizabeth Leovy before her marriage in June.

Mrs. Annan chose a black chiffon gown with the deep decolletage outlined in rhinestones. Her sister Helen chose a graceful frock of white chiffon boasting large rose dots.

Mrs. Simon T. Patterson I noticed in the foyer chatting with friends. Mrs. Joseph Scribner was there wearing an attractive black lace gown and I caught a glimpse of Mrs. Mortimer Miller in hobby beige satin. Mary Mellon McClung looked charming in a rose-embroidered net gown made with a ruffled skirt, and the Gordon Kings I saw, too, with Mrs. King wearing a black and rust printed chiffon gown.

Seen In Foyer

Representing the younger set in Sewickley was Margaret McCready, wearing a hydrangea blue crepe gown fashioned very long with a scarf of the same material falling from the shoulder. Ruffles inserted below the hipline gave graceful fullness to the gown.

The William A. Duckhams were among the first nighters, with Mrs. Duckham appearing in a black lace frock with a ruffled skirt and a melon pink velvet coat with black fox fur banding the cape collar.

Mrs. William Thaw, Jr., wore black chiffon printed in gold and a black and gold metal cloth wrap. Apricot velvet and tulle formed Mrs. James E. Lewis' gown with which she wore a long apricot velvet coat.

Other Patrons

And Mr. and Mrs. George A. Kelley III were there with Mrs. Kelley wearing a sweeping black crepe dress with a rhinestone pin at the shoulder as the only decoration and a deep velvet coat with a deep collar of chinchilla.

As I was leaving the theater I saw Mrs. F. I. Merrick. Miss Suzanne Beatty appeared in black velvet. And chatting in the foyer were Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Jones III with Mrs. Jones wearing turquoise blue crepe and a velvet wrap in the same shade and Mrs. Jack Bissell who chose a quaint frock of white taffeta printed in rose with circular drapery in the back falling to form a brief train.

Anne Douglas Stewart in flowered chiffon and a turquoise blue velvet wrap was there with her fiance, John E. McKelvy.

Mrs. Felix B. Snowdon chose an informal crepe dinner dress with a cape collar. Helen Pendleton, a debutante of the past winter wore jade green satin and a green and gold coat. And I believe I caught a glimpse of the Christian Mays, with Mrs. May wearing honey beige net with the skirt fashioned of tiers of ruffles of the net. Mrs. Herbert A. May chose turquoise blue crepe for her gown.

I know of a dinner-dance to be given on December 29 in honor of Laura Collord, in the Pittsburgh Golf Club. And her uncle, Frederick C. Perkins of New York, is to be the host. will precede the ball which the Charles D. Marshalls of Fifth avenue will give that same evening in their home in honor of their daughter, Jane.

Dinner Party

Laura, you'll recall, will be presented on the evening of December 19 at a ball in the Pittsburgh Club, given by her parents, the George L. Collords, of Morewood avenue.

Yesterday a luncheon was given in honor of Margaret Hagan, daughter of Mrs. William C. Hagan, of Aylesboro avenue. Her marriage to Theodore Gregg Brown, of Chicago, is taking place on Wednesday, October 1. The luncheon was given by Mrs. Harry J. Wilhelm in her Ridgeville street home.

Miss Mary Annabel Mehaffey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Mehaffey, of Valencia, became the bride of Lee Wilson Hoovler, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Hoovler, of Mercer, on Saturday afternoon in the home of the bride, with the Rev. D. T. McCalmont, pastor of the Valencia United Presbyterian Church, officiating.

Married In Home

The bride wore a gown of ivory satin with a skirt of tulle and lace, and carried white roses and lilies of the valley. Her tulle veil was arranged with a cap of orange blossoms. Miss Margaret Jane Mehaffey was her sister's maid of honor, and wore deep peach chiffon and carried garden flowers. Miss Ruth Kelland, of Rose Point, Pa., cousin of the bride, in green chiffon, and Mrs. Earl Wooten, of Louise, Ky., a former classmate at Muskingum College, in peach chiffon, were the bridesmaids. They carried garden flowers. Earl Hoovler was his brother's best man. William Mehaffey, Jr., and Miss Dorothy Sautter sang, ac-

25 Heads of Other Clubs Attend Presidents' Day at Ingram

Twenty-five presidents from other clubs brought their good wishes to Mrs. Leroy C. Hess when she was inducted into office as president of the Ingram Woman's Club yesterday. The reception was held at Mrs. J. M. Rayburn's home in Prospect avenue and was attended by about 100 women. Mrs. F. A. Aiken, Mrs. Homer Anderson, Mrs. John Baird, Mrs. C. E. Bates and Mrs. C. W. Biggs were assistant hostesses.

All but four of the past presidents of the hostess club were in attendance and each of these gave a high light or two in the club's history. The music, which was the chief feature of entertainment, included several numbers by the club choral, in one of which Mrs. Mabel Bird Ensinger and Mrs. Nellie Elliott Miller sang solo parts; contralto solos by Mrs. L. Wallace Ohl, and soprano numbers which Mrs. Elsie Breese Mitchell, guest soloist, gave with her usual artistry. Mrs. P. C. McBeth was the accompanist.

Mrs. F. C. Rex, choral leader, announced a card party, its very first benefit, which this group will hold in the Firemen's Association Building the afternoon of October 7.

"The Album," a novel feature, will be presented by the members at the president's day and reciprocity meeting which the Friday Conversational Club, of Monongahela, will hold on October 3. At the next fortnightly meeting the music department will present Arthur Jennings in an organ recital, and on October 27 the art department will arrange a trip to the international art exhibit. The civic department has its days in November, when state federation reports will be heard, and in February when a library tea is scheduled. Mrs. Ralph W. Johnston, of the Congress of Clubs, will address the members in November, the history department will take charge of a December meeting and there is also to be a community tree sing that month. The New Year's reception and a study of American antiques are down for January, a musical in addition to the library tea for February, and in March, "Europe—Off the Beaten Path," and the annual banquet. Another musical in April and an evening devoted to "Architecture of Old Cathedrals" are that month's events and the closing ones with the exception of a hospital sewing and rose day in June.

Invitations have been sent out by the Woman's Club of Wilkinsburg for a reception in honor of the new president, Mrs. W. C. Graham, on Monday, October 6, in the Y. W. C. A. Community House. Mrs. John L. Crouse is receiving responses.

The evening department of the Woman's Club of Aspinwall will hold a Mother Goose party in the clubhouse on Thursday afternoon. About 100 children of kindergarten age have been invited to attend with their mothers. A delightful program has been arranged, which will be in charge of Mrs. Bertram Duffy, who will impersonate Mother Goose, and who is to teach the club kindergarten this year in the absence of Mrs. Eleanore Duckwall.

Party for Children

Mrs. H. C. Reller, a former president of the Woman's Club of Pittsburgh, will be home shortly from a three-month European trip. A number of clubs have already scheduled Mrs. Reller to tell of her travel experiences in Iceland, Norway, Russia, Finland, Germany (where she witnessed the Passion Play), Switzerland and France. Mrs. Reller flew from Geneva to Paris.

* * *

Miss Virginia Harmon will present a musical program at the president's reception of the Keystone Association for Historical Research, which is to be held October 6 at the Congress of Clubs. An Armistice Day program will have Dr. Charles H. Heninger as speaker, and December's regular meeting will be marked by a paper on "History of Two Pioneers in Pennsylvania," by Mrs. W. L. Kinsey. Mrs. Annie O. Wilson is arranging a dramatic program for a Christmas party, to be held at her home in Rippey street. Mrs. Elizabeth Motz, of the League of Women Voters; Maj. Robert M. Ewing, Mrs. William R. Gardner and Mrs. Dulce Fiske Fairman are other speakers listed for the year, which will close on May 12 with a luncheon.

Club Opening

The East McKeesport Woman's Club, which opened its season with a reception for the president, Mrs. J. S. Hughes, last Wednesday, has elected to study the United States this season and in its future programs will discuss the geological story, the historical rivers, the Northwest, California, "Our American Mediterranean," "Diversification Usurps King Cotton in Dixie," Washington, "National Ideals and How They Have Developed," "Twentieth Century Achievements," "Our Ten Leading Industries" and "Some Changes and Contrasts in America 1900-30." Discussion of motion pictures, an open forum on "Points of Good Citizenship" and a guest day, together with the June outing, will furnish variation from the study programs.

For the very good reason that the president will not be home from Europe on the date set for her reception, the Chartiers Clubs' Association has postponed its president's day in honor of Mrs. Walter R. Fleming from October 9 to October 23. It will be held in Mrs. Fleming's home, Pioneer avenue, Dormont. Mrs. Fleming and Mrs. John S. Sloan, together with the other members of their party, are sailing for home October 4.

The annual meeting with election of officers of the Zoar Home Auxiliary will be held tomorrow in the home at Allison Park. Luncheon will be served. Mrs. E. D. McCafferty, Mrs. F. O. Irvin and Mrs. L. W. McClinton comprise the nominating committee.

Miss Betty Macdonald, New York danseuse, will appear as an entertainer at the first drama department meeting of the Congress of Clubs Thursday. Miss Macdonald's work has included presentations with the Martha Graham Concert Group, the Greenwich Village Follies and the Neighborhood Playhouse of New York. Her interpretation on Thursday will be "The Javanaise." Miss Bessie Hubach will accompany her at the piano.

Mrs. John H. Bragdon, reader, and a pioneer in children's movies work, will be the speaker at the study class preceding the luncheon and will review "The Ship" by St. John Ervine.

Miss Helen Irwin, well-known radio and concert reader, will give a one-act play, and Elmer Kenyon, honorary president of the Pittsburgh Drama League, will speak on current plays.

Mrs. L. A. Hubach is chairman of hostesses with Mrs. W. G. A. Millar, Mrs. D. W. Seville, Mrs. Robert J. Gibson, Mrs. Willis E. Fish, Mrs. William Colvin Wells, Mrs. J. E. Nelson and Dr. Luba Roban Goldsmith as aides.

DESIGNERS STRESS IMPORTANCE OF FASHIONABLE LACY FROCKS

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Sept. 23.—Lacy clouds continue to pile up on the evening horizon of the world of fashion. With the introduction of magnificent materials for evening frocks, the woman of discernment sees to it that her wardrobe contains at least one evening frock of lace each season, for lace graces any season. Unless one is able to buy a fine lace frock, it would be wiser to forego the pleasure of owning one. For cheap laces, more than any other inexpensive material, show their lowly origin. But on the other hand, a frock of good lace will bestow an aristocratic look on its wearer for some considerable time, especially if the frock is simply made so that it is not "dated." The lace frocks seen this season are delightfully made. Tiers on tiers of flounces, shirred or plain are used for the skirts and sometimes for the entire frock.

PERFECT CUT and fine materials mark this season's crop of dresses created to shine and sparkle at all evening functions. All who delight in wearing evening frocks and lovely wraps should be in their glory this season, for never were such garments more effective or more calculated to lend additional beauty and chic to the wearer. The two sketches selected to grace today's page are of evening frocks that are extremely attractive and yet simply in theme and execution. The first is a frock of shear black Chantilly lace and is from the new collection of Drecoll-Beer. The deep-cut decollette is discreetly bordered with diamante embroidery. Tiers of shirred lace flounces set on in points at the top form a skirt which is bouffant and foamy and which trails slightly in back.

THE OTHER SKETCH is of a Worth model of heavy black satin which has been titled "Reduction." It has a draped girdle fastening at one side and a flaring skirt with circular godets set in all around and starting at a point quite high on the skirt. There are, in all, six of these godets. The softly bloused bodice is cut in rounding line in front and a deep V behind. On one should is a novel ornament of black and white aigrettes.

REVIEWS OF SEASON'S OPENING ATTRACTIONS ON LEGITIMATE STAGE

Shaw Pokes Furious Fun At Our Democracy in "The Apple Cart"

By GEORGE SEIBEL.

NO DOUBT there were some people who went to see "The Apple Cart" at the Nixon Theater last night with the happy expectation of being bored. With his usual perversity, Bernard Shaw declined to humor them. No doubt there were some others who went with the conscientious desire to be instructed. Again the contrary dramatist insisted upon amusing them. And if there was in the auditorium, filled almost to the last seat, anybody with any other expectation or desire, Shaw had provided some ingenious disappointment or audacious surprise. For this play is full of surprises, from America coming back into the British Empire to Violet Kemble Cooper qualifying for the wrestling championships.

George Seibel

The time is the future, in order to let us down easy—for everything else is very much like the present. The scene is England, where they still have a royal family, thanks to the presence of a king who knows enough to laugh at democracy. And the action of the play revolves around a crisis as the ministry insists upon taking away from the king his last vestige of power, the Veto. Club pretending they are a cross section of British humanity.

As the King says, he never fights [illegible] sometimes wins. No better example of the power of G. B. S. himself has ever been labeled drama than by the Theater Guild.

LET THE LABEL PASS

It might as well be called a Socratic Debate. Or a special edition of London Punch. Or a sermon—or a lecture—or a day in the country. Perhaps it is nothing more than Shaw with eight or ten members of the Fabian Club pretending they are a cross section of British humanity.

But how they do talk! If to listen to witty and intellectual conversation is the test of a civilized being, Pittsburgh civilization enjoyed the endurance test. And they were rewarded by witnessing the prowess of the declamative Violet Kemble Cooper in the art made famous by William Muldoon.

At the same time we had the uncomfortable sensation that Shaw was laughing both at us and at the English. When the American Ambassador announces the return of the Prodigal Son, the Queen thinks it may be an opportunity to civilize those Americans, but the King fears it is hopeless, as the English have not been able to civilize themselves.

Democracy gets the worst digs of all. According to the Shavian formula the politician in a democracy tells the people to "use their vote intelligently by voting for him." Flattery has taken the place of force, but all the other vices of government flourish riotously.

ONE OF SHAW'S WITTIEST

While this is not one of Shaw's weightiest plays, it is one of the wittiest. And besides the wit there is a bounteous admixture of humor. The whole royal cabinet might have marched right out of Dickens with Ernest Cossart as Boanerges and Eva Leonard-Boyne as the Postmistress-General leading the grand march.

What a parade it is! Marshaled by that grand old showman, Barnum Shaw, they exhibit all the antics of our political circuses.

But as you watch them, as you duck your head to escape the flying dart of some savage satire, the drama gradually emerges from the dialogue. The conflict is between Tom Powers as King Magnus and Claude Rains as the Prime Minister Proteus. It is not merely the contest of two figures created by the dramatist, it is the contest between two actors who are so evenly matched that neither can win the crown.

ACTING THAT'S MAGNIFICENT

Claude Rains as Proteus is a pocket edition of Robespierre. While Tom Powers as Magnus is a parlor Mephistopheles. Here are two exhibitions of acting in the great tradition of the grandfathers.

As for that adorable lady, Violet Kemble Cooper, fresh from the cast of "Lysistrata," with the aquiline image of Siddons stamped upon her, what a Cleopatra she would make!

But it is such an admirable cast from first to last that the differences in achievement may be merely differences in opportunity. Take for instance Frederick Truesdell as the American Ambassador standing for "Progress!" In his one brief scene he lets us see Main Street and Babbitt and Pennsylvania Avenue and the U. S. Senate! Another mirror held up to democracy!

Is Mr. Shaw really spreading propaganda for Signor Mussolini? This will have to be investigated.

ALVIN OPENS SEASON WITH DRACULA PROWLING

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

The Alvin opened its new season last night, letting loose again that fiendish gentleman, Count Dracula. The count, who really isn't a man at all, but an "undead thing" that goes prowling around at night, is the title character in the drama, "Dracula," which has been seen here previously. The plot, as most will recall, has to do with a "nice" 500-year-old vampire.

When "Dracula" first played here, we classified it as an emotional nightmare in three prolonged shudders and four scenes. And the classification is still good.

THIRSTY FIEND

The new "Dracula" is the same old "Dracula," except for the players. Renfield, the maniac, eats as many flies and makes as many gruesome shrieks as before. The grey-haired Dutch scientist is just as relentless in his effort to pound a spike through the vampire's heart. The pale heroine, Lucy, is just as pale and dreams all the horrible dreams she used to. And Dracula himself is as fiendish and as thirsty as ever he was in past theatrical seasons.

Carl Reed, who portrays the goofy fly-eater, is the only name in the cast that we recognize as being here with the first Pittsburgh presentation. Then, as we recall, he played the part of a servant.

CONVINCING CAST

However, the present company is convincing and efficient. Courtney White gives a Dracula of sepulchral achievement. Maurice Morris, as the Dutch scientist, and Marcella Gaudel, as the pale Lucy, make their characters live. Other players are Arnold Daly, William Melville, James Gordon and Louise Ardell.

"Dracula," being an old play and the fact we have seen it twice before doesn't tend to arouse extra enthusiasm. But it is a sensational mystery drama, and we would like to be able to capture again the thrill that a first viewing brings.

Spooky

Marcella Gaudel is prominent in "Dracula," melodrama of the supernatural presented as the season opener in the Alvin.

YOUNG RUSSIAN STAR IN COMING PLAYBILL

"Candle Light," described as a gay Viennese comedy, opens next Monday night for a week's engagement in the Shubert Alvin. It brings Eugenie Leontovich, young Russian actress, who achieved stardom in "And So to Bed," in which she appeared last year as Mrs. Pepys.

Bill Robinson, generally considered the leading Negro comedian, recently was acclaimed the greatest tap dancer of all time by the American Association of Dance Masters, comes to the Nixon next week in "Brown Buddies." Adelaide Hall, Bill's co-star, appeared with him in "Blackbirds of 1928."

The play to be presented by the George Sharp Players in the Pitt Theater next week will be "The Wasp's Nest," a mystery play, the first to be given by the company this season. "Elizabeth Sleeps Out," originally announced for next week, has been postponed until the week of October 6.

Air Device Changes Propeller's Pitch

Longer life and lower running cost for airplane motors looked for by John Rapp Zipay, 3700 Milton avenue, as a result of a variable pitch airplane propeller which he has invented and patented. His device enables a pilot to change the pitch of the propeller as he desires.

FIVE CUBIC FEET OF FOOD STORAGE SPACE

This new Kelvinator is a big electric refrigerator. It gives you five cubic feet of interior space—over nine square feet of shelf room. It freezes 42 ice cubes (4 pounds of ice) at a time. Its cabinet is massive, with heavy table top and extra thick, tight-fitting door. The Temperature Selector gives you instant choice of five different freezing speeds. Exterior finish is a special white enamel, developed by Kelvinator, on rust-proof steel. The interior is finished in white porcelain. All corners are rounded. Fittings are heavy die-cast hardware, in Butler chrome finish.

In short, here is a real Kelvinator—at a price which makes its IMMEDIATE purchase not only possible, but easily practicable. It is here, awaiting your inspection. See it without delay.

GOLDEN ROD DRAMA CALLS ON ASPINWALL

By WILLIAM PFARR

The stage debut of Helen Ritter deserves attention. Helen is a sophomore in Aspinwall High School and has red hair. She has played in those school theatricals which are a necessary part of graduation, but she had never, until last night, been on what, in an agreeable mood, might be called the legitimate stage.

Well, Helen, who is 15 or so, made her debut last night. She made it as Mary Morgan, the innocent little gal who rushes fearlessly into the barroom and sez to daddy, sez she: "Daddy, come home tonight; mother is waiting."

BUMPED ON NOODLE

Helen dies in one of the early acts, having been bumped on the noodle by a bottle carelessly tossed by a bartender. But Helen dies nobly; in fact, Helen ran away with acting honors last night.

And now it is about time to report that the vehicle in which Helen made her debut was "Ten Nights in a Bar Room" and the theater was Cap'n Menke's Golden Rod Showboat, which is certainly anchored right above Helen's Aspinwall High School.

NO PRETENSION

After all these weeks it would be more or less redundant to go into the acting qualities of Cap'n Menke's troupe. It is the same one week after another. People go because the acting is supposed to be bad and the lines worse. We'd advise you to go.

Of course, if you measure things by the Minnie Fiske or Walter Hampden standards, "Ten Nights in a Bar Room" is enough to drive a man to drink.

"Those We Love" Gives Pitt Players Chance For Serious Work

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Those We Love," presented by the George Sharp Players in the Pitt last night, gave the regular members of that organization, as well as a number of others added because the action calls for the appearance of 15 characters, opportunity to show what they can do with a play that has more dramatic weight than those forming the ordinary routine of stock production. For this "Those We Love" is no puff of fluff, but a serious bit of writing in which "comedy relief," so-called, is neither frequent nor over-worked.

TRIANGLE AGAIN

Written by George Abbott, one of the authors of "Broadway," and E. K. Lauren, it calls again upon the old dramatic foundation stone, the problem of the eternal triangle, but provides a new solution that never came out of Euclid. That is in having the necessity of continuing family solidarity appearing more important than anything else when disruption is threatened because the male parent has so conducted himself that he is to be named as corespondent in a divorce case.

The boy of the family brings it about. He thinks his father will need him and his mother, and the simplicity with which he presents the appeal, which is not intended to be that, induces his mother, terribly hurt, to believe that it were best for all to begin all over again.

BOY BRIGHT SPOT

This boy, played by Edwin Phillips, was a very bright spot in the play and Master Edwin, if he didn't absolutely "steal the show" came mighty close to it. "Isn't he good," was heard to be exclaimed by more than one when he made his exit after his first appearance. He was good, indeed. In fact, he is the boy who originated the part in the New York production of the play, never offered here before.

He was good and so were several others, particularly Lulu May Hubbard, as the injured wife; Jean May, in the part of a most human siren, whose mistake lay in assuming that love between opposite sexes can be platonic; and Paul McGrath, as the erring male. Edwin Vail and Mabel Kroman, the latter as a maid, took ample care of such comedy as the plot provides. Alice Ann Baker, Hugh Banks, Robert Fiske, Joseph Lawrence, Stephanie Diamond and Virginia Harmon did well in roles of only momentary importance.

Expert on Safety Will Address Clubs

Service clubs of Pittsburgh will be guests of the Monarch Club and National Safety Council at a luncheon meeting Thursday in the Fort Pitt Hotel. Fred W. Johnson, managing director of the Citizens' Safety Council, Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, will be the speaker.

BUC BOSSES SILENT ON ENS RUMORS

EVIDENTLY SOME OF the baseball dopesters around the big city circuits were taking a little too much for granted in concluding that all of the major league managers were sure of their jobs for next season and that no change would be made at any point along the line. According to latest indications, the off-season may be marked by a shifting of pilots in from one to three cities. With rumor adding Pittsburgh to the uncertain list, two of the doubtful places are in the National League and one in the American.

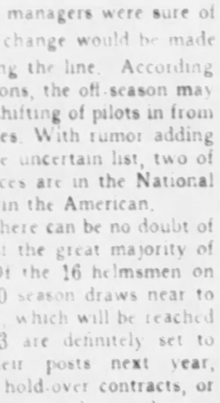
Jewel Ens

Of course, there can be no doubt of the fixed state of the great majority of the skippers. Of the 16 helmsmen on duty as the 1930 season draws near to the closing point, which will be reached next Sunday, 13 are definitely set to continue at their posts next year, through new or hold-over contracts, or by reason of known conditions that assure their retention. These are Gabby Street, John McGraw, Wilbert Robinson, Bill McKechnie, Dan Howley and Burt Shotton in the National League, and Connie Mack, Walter Johnson, Bob Shawkey, Roger Peckinpaugh, Buck Harris, Bill Killefer and Donie Bush in the American.

BUT THAT THE end of the season will see Joe McCarthy parting company with the Cubs is now officially admitted, while in addition to that it is rumored that Heinie Wagner is done as leader of the Boston Red Sox, and to top it all off comes the report that even here in Pittsburgh a managerial change is not beyond the bounds of possibility.

Whether Jewel Ens is to go or stay is wholly a matter of conjecture right now. No official statement of a definite nature one way or the other can be drawn from the Pirate owners. They dismiss all inquiries with the [illegible] and [illegible] about ter for [illegible] reports that [illegible] Ens their own response is that McCarthy still is manager of the Cubs. It may or may not be sufficient that, while the Buc bosses refuse to confirm rumors that Ens is to be unseated, neither do they admit, directly or by implication, that they are going to reappoint him.

OFFICIAL ADMISSION BY the heads of the Chicago National League club that Rogers Hornsby will be appointed as Joe McCarthy's successor spells a possibility that the majors may have at least one playing manager next season.



Rogers Hornsby

Bench managers have been the rule all around since Bucky Harris gave up filling emergency infield roles and Billy Southworth was dropped as Cardinal pilot in mid-season last year. Hornsby, if appointed, probably last year. Hornsby probably will do considerable pinch-hitting.

THE YOSTS AND the Hostons are not the only sons of once famous football fathers breaking into the college gridiron ranks this season. Among the candidates working out under Coach Tuss McLaughry for positions on the Brown University team at Providence is Joe Thompson, of Beaver Falls. He is the son of the late Col. Joseph H. Thompson, who was captain and a star halfback of the W. U. P. (now Pitt) eleven in 1904 and 1905 and coach of the Panthers from 1909 to 1912, inclusive. Young Thompson, who prepped at Shadyside Academy and is a sophomore at Brown, is a candidate for quarterback. He has lots of tough opposition, both veteran and new material, but is reported to be giving a good account of himself.

ANY GOLF FOLLOWERS who are superstitiously inclined may have an alibi for Bobby Jones if the latter is defeated in the present national amateur championship tournament at Merion and is thus prevented from accomplishing the unprecedented feat of winning all four major titles in one year. They can blame it on the hoodoo "13."

Jones is wrestling with the jinx numeral in a double sense. He is fighting for his thirteenth major golf title, and the Merion struggle is the thirteenth United States amateur championship tournament in which he has taken part. However, the showing of the Georgia wonder on the first day, when he was the only starter in 168 to better par for the opening 18 holes of qualifying play, appears to indicate that it takes a whole lot more than hoodoo figures to beat a great golfer.

IF DAN HOWLEY, manager of the Reds, now here for the final series of Pittsburgh's baseball season, has the right dope, the world championship will come back to the National League this year. Like everybody else, he considers the Cards sure pennant winners in the senior wheel, and he thinks they will beat the A's in the title series.

Dan Howley

Howley bases his opinion on the fact that every man among the St. Louis regulars is fast, including Catcher Jimmy Wilson, and that Gabby Street can send a great ball club on the field with only one left-hand hitter in the lineup. For the latter reason he believes the Cards have no cause to fear Bob Grove and Rube Walberg, Connie Mack's southpaws.

FURTHERMORE, DAN FIGURES that the A's are not as strong as they were last year. "They don't look as good," he says. "They've been a sweet club for years now and the breakup has to come some time. The punch isn't so potent, to my eyes. Simmons and Cochrane have been doing all the hitting. I hear that Jimmy Foxx has grown pretty fat, and Mule Haas hasn't had such a good season. The pitchers have not been going nearly so well, either. No, things are not what they used to be around Shibe Park. The championship should come back to the National League.

BILLY RHIEL, citizen of Youngstown, O., and former Robin, joined a select baseball circle when he made a triple play unassisted while playing second base for Portland in a Pacific Coast League game at Seattle last Sunday. Rhiel's play was only the fifth of its kind in Pacific Coast League history and it has been executed only seven times in the majors.

Two of the seven unassisted triple plays in the big show were made at Forbes Field, the first by Glenn Wright, then with the Pirates, against the Cardinals on May 7, 1925, and the second by Jim Cooney, of the Cubs, against the Bucs in the morning game of Memorial Day in 1927. Bill Wambsganss, with Cleveland against Brooklyn on October 10, 1920, was the only player ever to complete such a play in a world series game. The other big leaguers to make triple plays unaided were Neal Ball, and George Burns, both of the Indians, Ernie Padgett, of the Braves, and Johnny Neun, while with the Tigers. Such a play has been credited to Paul Hines, old Providence outfielder, but investigation has disclosed that another player made the third putout.

MILTON E. ROLLE, of 1512 Franklin street, North Side, has discovered that Paul Waner's feat of making 200 or more hits per

CUBS REMAIN 2½ GAMES FROM TOP

Associated Press

Playing baseball at an 800 clip is championship ball in anybody's league, but that is what the St. Louis Cardinals have been doing since August 17 to all but clinch the National League pennant.

On August 16, the Cards had won only six more games than they had lost, but on the next day the match was lit that eventually turned the Heydler pennant race into a red hot affair. An even break with the New York Giants in a doubleheader was the start. Since that date the Cards have won 28 of their 35 starts.

The Cardinals moved a little nearer the clinching of the pennant yesterday with a 15-to-7 triumph over the Phillies, while the Chicago Cubs were downing the Boston Braves 6 to 2, in the only games played in the major leagues. The victories of the league leader and the runner-up still left the Cubs trailing by two and one-half games, but made their task of winning even more difficult. The Cardinals have five more games on their schedule and need to win only three of them even if the Cubs sweep their final four-game series with the Cincinnati Reds. The Robins, which were idle yesterday, are four games back of the Cards, and must win all of their remaining five games if the Cardinals lose all of their games.

The result of the two games yesterday left the three contenders looking like this:

	Won	Lost	Pct.	Games Behind Leader	Games to Play
St. Louis	93	61	.604		5
Chicago	90	64	.584	2½	5
Brooklyn	84	65	.564	4	6

Win or lose today, the standing of the trio will read like this tonight:

	Win.	Lose
St. Louis	.605	.597
Chicago	.574	.576
Brooklyn	.576	.560

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE HANDLESS TAXI DRIVER—Many years ago Otto (Buck) Cain, of Oolitic, Indiana, incurred the loss of his arms by grasping a high tension wire. Subsequently, not being able to resume his work as a machinist, Cain learned to drive a car. Despite his handicap he can change tires, collect fares and make change and manipulate his taxi through any traffic. In all his experience at the wheel he never has had an accident or a traffic cop call. In his home town he is admired as one of the city's most ambitious citizens.

CUBS' SHAKEUP ROCKS GAME

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The revolutionary move of Owner William Wrigley, of the Cubs, in dropping Manager Joe McCarthy in favor of Rogers Hornsby will not be hailed with delight by the rank and file of baseball players in the National League and there will be much regret expressed by the various magnates who realize what McCarthy has accomplished for the senior circuit in the way of prestige and patronage.

Joe McCarthy

McCarthy and not Wrigley made Chicago the baseball capital. Something like five years ago, Marse Joe, up from Louisville, was given charge of an outfit of players who were ill-disciplined and satisfied with their second-division surroundings. Seventh or eighth place was chosen for McCarthy in his first year, there being practically no change in the personnel of the club he first took to California. And what happened?

MISFIT SQUAD

The leader from Louisville surely had a misfit squad in camp. He divided his team into squads and there was no way to distinguish the first team from the second club. Establishing a fine brand of discipline, McCarthy then won the affection of every member of his squad by his true-blue methods. The months rolled on and the terrible Cubs that were, sporting almost the same lineup, refused to jump through for the other clubs. September came and the Bears were still in the first division—yes, they were actually flag factors, and when the bell rang they were still in the first division.

Each succeeding year under McCarthy saw the Bears improved until last season the National League flag was won. The death of Pitcher Harold Carlson and injuries to Hornsby and other stars this season may have prevented the Bruins from repeating.

POPULAR ATTRACTION

Meantime, Marse Joe developed the Cubs to such a point they were the most popular attraction in the game. Fans stormed Wrigley Field to see their favorites until all attendance records were broken. That happened last season, when the Bears played to more than one and one-quarter millions in their home lot. The same heights will be reached this year. But the man who developed the club will get the "gate" as a reward.

Wrigley, according to the late reports, is peeved because the Cubs did not win the world series, yet Hornsby was almost a complete "bust" in that series, else the Cubs would have made a better showing.

The Chicago owner probably knows less about baseball than even some of his brother officials. For him or any of his office subordinates to sit in swivel chairs

ROOF SEATS FOR WORLD SERIES

HORNSBY NEW CUB MANAGER

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—(INS.)—Setting at rest a maze of rumors regarding the 1931 managership of the Chicago Cubs, Owner William Wrigley, Jr., today confirmed the report that Rogers Hornsby is to replace Joe McCarthy as the Cubs' manager next year.

Wrigley will give Hornsby a contract for a year or longer, he said. Hornsby's salary in the new job has not been ascertained.

Wrigley revealed an almost insurmountable desire to produce a world-championship team in his Chicago Cubs. It was this desire which prompted him to try the change in management, his statement regarding McCarthy's dismissal showed.

McCARTHY NOT THE MAN

The chewing-gum magnate didn't think McCarthy was the man to produce a world-championship team, he said.

Wrigley said he had planned to present the contract to Hornsby when the season closes next Sunday. The action was to have been delayed so McCarthy would be spared embarrassment during the playing season, but the plans of an impending change became generally known beforehand.

NO PERSONAL GRUDGE

Arrangements with Hornsby, at present a second baseman for the Chicago club, will be made at once, Wrigley announced.

Wrigley insisted there is no personal disagreement between him and McCarthy, and said the move was made with the intention of winning another National League pennant next season.

He said he would do everything in his power to procure another managerial berth in the big leagues for McCarthy. Wrigley indicated his dissatisfaction with McCarthy began during the world series last year when the Philadelphia Athletics won the world championship.

The final decision was made last night, as even late yesterday Wrigley was admittedly wavering.

JONES FIGHTS TO OVERTAKE GEORGE

took a spoon and from a good lie in the sand hit a great shot 80 yards from the green. The big gallery gasped. He pitched 15 feet from the pin and got his par 5 with two putts.

At the water-bordered fifth, Bob drove in the creek and had to drop out with a penalty stroke.

He was on in 3 and with two putts, the last from six feet, he took 5, one over par.

LITTLE AMONG LEADERS

Lawson Little was in considerable difficulty in hos homeward journey after a fine start and needede 42 strokes, eight over par, for the last half to post 18 and a two-day total of 151.

The Canadian champion, C. Ross Somerville, qualified safely despite a rather erratic 80 today. His 75 of the first day saved him a total of 155.

Gene Homans, the former Princeton star from Englewood, N. J., shot a steady 36-36—72 to offset his 80 of the first day and place himself very comfortably in the match play competition. It was one of the best come-backs of the day.

Two other recoveries were staged, by Phillips Finlay, of New York, with 80-75—155 and Charles Zaver, of Los Angeles, with 79-76—155, clinching qualifying positions for both of these young stars.

On the other hand the casualties included Roland MacKenzie, Walker Cup star; Frank Dolp, of Portland, Ore., fromer Western amateur champion and Francis H. I. Brown, of Honolulu, California state champion. MacKenzie withdrew. Dolp and Brown with 164 and 165, respectively, were out of the running.

GOODMAN QUALIFIES

Johnny Goodman finished with a 76, giving him a 36-hole total of 149 and a safe qualifying position.

Don oMe, the Walker cup golfer from Portland, is on the ragged edge of qualifying with a total of 157. Moe had 83 today, 45 out and 38 in, as against 74 yesterday.

Gaston Peek, of Houston, Tex., who had a bad 85 yesterday, made a brilliant effort to come back, but stumbled into a 7 at the sixteenth "quarry hole," eH was out in 37 and back in 38 for a good total of 76, but his 36-hole figure of 161 apparently doomed him to elimination.

George Voigt, the New York favorite, finished with an ordinary 78 for a total of 154, safely in the qualifying fold.

79 LOW FOR LOCALS

ARDMORE, Pa., Sept. 23.—Greer McIlvain and W. C. Fownes, Jr., of Oakmont, and Fred Brand, Jr., of Shannopin, carded 79 each to set the pace for the Pittsburgh delegation in the first 18 holes of the 36-hole qualifying test in the National Amateur golf tournament here yesterday.

Fownes is a veteran performer and former holder of the national amateur title. The scores of other Pittsburghers ranged up to 84, and indications are that the Steel City representatives will have to card phenomenal rounds today to win places among the 32 qualifiers who will start match play tomorrow. The scores of the Pittsburghers:

Greer McIlvain, Oakmont	42-37	—79
William C. Fownes, Jr., Oakmont	40-39	—79

CROWE HAS VETERAN ELEVEN AT ST. VINCENT

LATROBE COACH STRONG AT END BERTHS

By JESS CARVER,
Staff Correspondent.

LATROBE, Pa., Sept. 23.—Confronted with a 10-game schedule bristling with rugged opposition, Clem Crowe and Gene Edwards have a man-sized task on their hands here at St. Vincent. A corps of 10 lettermen, seven on the line, and a crop of promising freshmen serve to lighten the burden of developing a winner to the extent that the Bear Cat mentors are openly confident of making a better record this year than they did last, when their team won four of nine games and tied one.

In the opening game of the season last week, Geneva College turned the Bear Cats back in decisive fashion, principally by use of an aerial attack that bewildered the Saints' defense. The line gave a good account of itself, living up to expectations.

FINE PAIR OF ENDS

St. Vincent boasts a crack pair of ends in young Heinz Best and Lengyle. There is little to choose between them, Lengyle, perhaps, being a stronger offensive wing. Best is a deadly tackler and smart withal. Other wings include Fuccia, Carney, Ondrekiscka, McNally and Scioto, who'll understudy Best and Lengyle.

Zappone and Dunlap, a pair of husky tackles, are fit running mates for the end pair. Both have been under fire on more than one occasion. They are hard and fast chargers on the offense and bulwarks when the other club has the ball. Zappone apparently is out for the season with a broken ankle received in the Geneva game last Friday.

Crowe will insert Hammond or Craffey, capable reserves, in his place. Hammond is making a great bid for a starting job, and the least little slip on the part of Dunlap will be costly.

Yankovich, Pipik have been getting first call, their experience standing them in good stead. Melago is ready to go in there, too, and will provide valuable timber for reserve purposes once he acquires necessary experience.

Burk, a veteran, and Brown will handle the center job. Burk played a bang-up game last year, his defensive work being very valuable.

NOT SET ON BACKS

The coaches, especially Edwards, who handles the backfield, are not set on their backs as yet, much shifting and experimenting being necessary. Dorsbocher, Rizzo and Genovese, along with Bodnar, are quarterback candidates. Dorsbocher and Rizzo appear to be in line for the job, Dorsbocher being a capable passer.

The veteran Westfal and Capt. Evancho, Martak, fresh from Bellefonte Academy; Furrin, a good kicker, and Molmar are contesting for the halfback jobs. Martak, a hard driving back, consistent punter and good pass receiver, will be hard to keep out of the action. Westfal possesses the needed experience to make a fine back. Molmar is a hard runner, but cannot pass worth a hoot.

Kirchner is back at fullback, where he played a fine game last year. He plunges well and backs up a line in shipshape fashion. Westfal doubles at full and half, playing no few minutes as an understudy to Kirchner last year.

The fact that the line showed to such good advantage against Geneva, even though the defense against the forward pass was lax, encourages the Bear Cat coaches to believe that their eleven will have a good year. The attack is expected to function in right smart fashion once a definite backfield structure has been erected.

MEET WESTINGHOUSE

Geneva was played last week and Westinghouse Tech will appear at Latrobe this week. On October 4, the Bear Cats face Mt. St. Mary's at home. St. Thomas will be met at Scranton October 11; Canisus at Buffalo October 19; Thiel at home October 25; Broaddus at Latrobe November 1; St. Francis at Greensburg on Armistice Day; Carlisle Medical Corps at Latrobe November 15 and the season will be closed November 22 with the annual battle with St. Bonaventure at Olean, N. Y.

The Bear Cats are attired in green jerseys with gold rosin stripes, gold and green striped socks and gold and green helmets.

Richard (Beau Brummel) Guy remains at the helm as athletic director, where he is busy making two bucks grow where only one grew before.

FAIR TO OPEN

WAYNESBURG, Sept. 23—The eighty-ninth annual Carmichaels Fair will open tomorrow and continue for three days. A program of running races and dog races is carded.

BUCS MAY SIGN M'CARTHY

Although they refuse to comment on the matter in a significant way, there seems to be a likelihood that the owners of the Pittsburgh club would be willing to talk to Joe McCarthy regarding the leadership of the Pirates.

Jewel Ens, like McCarthy, has proved himself a highly capable leader and one that has the respect and admiration of his players, but the Pirate officials have not as yet said anything regarding their plans for next year.

Under the rules of baseball, a manager, when he is released, is a free agent and, therefore, may go where he chooses. So McCarthy may be installed in the American League, perhaps with the Yankees. He doubtless will have many big offers.

"It is not an affair of ours and we do not wish to say anything about it," said Vice President Sam Dreyfuss, of the Pirates, in touching on the dismissal of McCarthy.

The Pirates' home season will be brought to a close tomorrow afternoon when the Pirates and Reds meet in a single game. The Buccos then will depart for St. Louis to take on the league leaders in four battles that will wind up the season.

The pirates yesterday stopped off in Huntingdon, Pa., where they were defeated by the Penn Centrals. The score was 10 to 8. Jim Mosolf and Bernie Walter pitched for the Pirates.

PIRATES BEATEN

The Pirates were trimmed at Huntington, Pa., yesterday by the Penn Centrals, of Altoona. The exhibition game brought out a flock of Bucco rookies, but the youngsters, aided by the veterans, could not grab the verdict. The score was 10 to 8.

Jack Cummings, Pittsburgh boy and former major league receiver, was behind the bat for the Penn Centrals. Cummings featured the battles with three hits, including a homer and a triple.

Jim Mosolf worked five innings for the Pirates and was found for 16 hits. Bernard Walter finished o the slab for the Pirates. Skelton and Lolger held the big leaguers to 10 hits. The score:

Sharkey-Campolo Go Not to Be Postponed

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(INS.)—Denial was made by Madison Square Garden officials today that the Jack Sharkey-Victorio Campolo 15-round heavyweight battle at the Yankee Stadium next Thursday night will be postponed, thus quelling rumors that the bout is to be dropped because of a lack of interest, because Sharkey is ill or for any one of a number of other reasons.

GRID RULES Interpretations

PLAY NO. 20.

With second down and seven yards to go, Davis, of Lehigh, plunges through the Lafayette line, and, when tackled, fumbles the ball. Sullivan, of Lafayette, picks up the ball, juggles it momentarily, but fails to gain possession of it, and Bennett, of Lehigh, secures it and is downed six yards in advance of where it originally had been put into play.

What is the correct ruling?

ANSWER.

The referee rules that it is third down and one yard to gain for Lehigh. Had Sullivan actually have gained possession after the fumble and then lost the ball it would have been a first down for Lehigh.

GRID CONFERENCE TO OPEN THIS WEEK-END

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS

THREE GAMES TO MARK INAUGURAL

By TOM BIRKS

The Western Pennsylvania independent gridiron conference will swing into action this week-end. Two games are listed for Sunday. West View will entertain Freddie Iverson's Olympics at the park and the Big Red McChesneytown machine will visit East Pittsburgh.

The Burns-Hope Harvey Majestic game will be played under the flood lights at Parnassus High School Field the following Wednesday evening. Manager Jimmy Smith of the latter club has been fighting to have the lights installed and at last success has crowned his efforts.

Today is the last for managers to turn in the playing lists for the initial games. Each club will be allowed 20 players and this list can be changed at any time. However, five days must elapse before signed players can get into conference games.

BIG CROWDS EXPECTED

Both games Sunday are expected to be played before banner crowds and the capacity of the Quarry grounds and West View Park may be taxed. Coach Pauli of East Pittsburgh is working hard getting Joe Waghaugh's stars in shape, and Hector Kennedy is driving the Latrobe machine hard since the Christy Park setback.

On Sunday Stanley Berkman and Shack Schachern will be directing the Muzzio machine against the Tube City. It is hard to say who will act as quarterback in this important game for the Olympics. Iverson and Coach Bill Sullivan are fully satisfied with the work of Barnes former Virginia Military Institute player, and also of Scott former Cornell luminary. English former Tech star, and Williams late of Waynesburg, probably will start at end for the Olympics. Manager Paul Muzzio has called a practice session for this evening and wants the following players to report: Booth, Hamer, Erb, Brockett, Brown, Haudie, Kelly, Fox, Stack, Dummer, Wojanis, Getts, Splatt, Muzzio, Berkman, Schachern, Cole, Maler, Kenny and Atkins. This is probably the 20 players who will represent the Parkers in the conference.

TO SIGN PITT STARS

Manager Jimmy Smith of Burns states Toby Uansa and Tom Parkinson former Pitt stars will be wearing the black and white of the upriver club in the independent ranks this season. Smith admitted that the names were not on the dotted line as yet, but expected to sign both men late this afternoon.

The Ambridge Mystics will have the Pleasant Valley Smilers for their opposition Sunday at Ambridge.

Donnelli May Be Made Professional

Because of his grid status with Duquesne University, it was reported Buff Donnelli will lose his amateur status as a soccer player. The United States Soccer Association has ruled:

"There is no objection to Donnelli registering as an amateur soccer player unless he is a paid football coach."

Donnelli is freshman coach at the Bluff school.

MY 50 YEARS IN BASEBALL

By CONNIE MACK, MANAGER OF WORLD CHAMPION PHILADELPHIA ATHLETICS

INSTALLMENT 14.

Coming down from 1891 to the end of my National League career in 1896, one can see a steady procession of gifted ballplayers who never will be forgotten by those fortunate enough to have watched their wizardry.

Connie Mack

Chicago had Clark Griffith, now president of the Washington American League club, who was one of the foxiest pitchers in baseball. He was not powerfully built, but had lots of stuff and backed it up with brains.

Griffith was a master pitcher, one of the best of his era. Anson still was in command and he had two spectacular outfielders in Bill Lange and Tommy Ryan. Ryan was one of the first left-handed throwers I ever saw who batted right handed. Lange was a six-footer, but one of the fastest men in the league.

Chicago also had an uncommonly good shortstop in Bill Dahlen, who 10 years later was to cover shortstop for the Giants in the world series with the Athletics. He topped his career by managing Brooklyn.

Boston had a shower of luminaries in Catchers Bennett and Ganzel and later Marty Bergen who followed me as the second man from the Brookfields to enter the major league.

Then there were first baseman Tom Tucker, second Baseman Lowe, Shortstop Long, Outfielders Duffy, Hamilton and McCarthy and Pitchers Nicholls and Stivetts.

TENNEY BEGINS CAREER

Fred Tenney, the next first basemen to introduce new ideas at the sack since Comiskey's revolutionary play was just starting.

St. Louis had Theodore Breitenstein, a standout lefthander. Catcher Buckley and Shortstop Ely. Breitenstein lasted for many years, for later he was sold to Cincinnati and stayed there a number of seasons. Then he went to the Southern League and pitched until he was 40.

In Cincinnati were Pitchers Mullane, Chamberlain, Dwyer and Rhines, Catcher Peitz, Outfielders Burke, Holliday and Miller, Shortstop Germany, Smith, Charley Irwin and the matchless Bid McPhee.

McPhee, a second baseman of the highest order, who was more than 40 when he stopped playing regularly, was the last big league player to resign to the new order of things and buy a glove.

He stopped scorching grounders and caught murderous liners bare handed as late as 1896 or 1897, when all other players long since had equipped themselves with protection for the hand.

New York in those days boasted of the swiftest pitcher of the day in Amos Rusie, the Hoosier Thunderbolt. Meekin was another useful pitcher, while George Davis, infielder, Mike Tieran, outfielder, and Charley Farrell, catcher, ranked high.

On the Phillies' roster were the great Ed Delehanty, mighty hitter, Sam Thompson, another fence demolisher, Bob Allen, shortstop, Billy Hallman, second baseman, and Roger Connor, first baseman.

STARS IN PITTSBURGH

Pittsburgh boasted Pitchers Hawley, Killen and Tenney, First Baseman Jake Beckley, Second Baseman Bierhauer and Outfielders Elmer Smith, Stenzel and Donovan, truly a sparkling trio.

Among Brooklyn's best were Pitcher Lovett, Outfielders Carruthers, Foutz and Griffin, Second Baseman Tom Daley, Shortstop Tommy Corcoran and Catcher Con Daly.

Under the leadership of Pat Tebeau, Cleveland always had a fighting team. Pat covered first, with Childs at second and McKean at short. Burkett and McAleer were two exceptional outfielders.

Burkett was a hard hitter and led the National League a number of times, while McAleer, as a ground coverer, never had an equal until Tris Speaker began to dazzle the fans.

Then there were Young and Cuppy, two great pitchers, and Jack O'Connor, a leading maskman.

Baltimore fans saw their most spectacular baseball in this era, for then it was that the famous Orioles were to the front. With Jack Doyle at first, Bill Gleason, now associated with me on the Athletics' team at second, the late lamented Hughey Jennings at short and the colorful John McGraw at third, it possessed an infield which combined fielding skill with high hitting and run scoring power. Then in the outfield were Joe Kelly, Walter Brodie and Bill Keeler.

KEELER AN EARLY "COBB"

Keeler was the Ty Cobb of his day. He was as fast as a bullet and impossible to retire when he made the right kind of a bunt. Wilbert Robinson, who has been manager of the Brooklyn club for years, was a catcher for the team and nobody behind the bat was smarter.

Bill Clarke was the other catcher and McMahon and Joe Corbett stood out as pitchers. Corbett was a brother of Jim Corbett, who needs no identification.

Washington's stars were not many, but Win Mercer, pitcher. Outfielders Selbach and Hoy and Shortstop Scheibeck stood out.

Louisville never had any luck in the National League but developed some wonderful players for Barney Dreyfuss to transfer to Pittsburgh after he had bought that franchise when the National League made the mistake of reducing its circuit from 12 to 8 clubs by dropping the Washington, Baltimore, Louisville and Cleveland.

This measure was adopted after I had left Pittsburgh.

At the time about which I am writing, Louisville had three wonderful players in Fred Clarke, Pitcher Chick Fraser and Charley Dexter, who could catch or play in the outfield. Wagner, Leach and Ritchey were yet to come.

PRAISES FRED CLARKE

Fred Clarke was a dashing outfielder, one of the most brilliant baseball has known. He could bat, run, field and throw and had a hair-trigger brain. He lasted a great many years and was good to the finish, for he decided to retire from playing before any fan might think he was standing in the way of some youngster on the bench.

These are the players, picked from memory, who impressed me in the period I have named. I wish to reiterate that I possibly have not named every good ball player from 1891 to 1896 in the National League, for I have made no pretense of so doing.

It would be inconvenient and wearisome to the reader to mention everybody.

HORNSBY NEW CUB MANAGER

between Hornsby and Charley Grimm as McCarthy's successor.

"MUST BE CHAMPIONS"

McCarthy has managed the Bruins for the past five years.

McCarthy, now in Boston, refused to comment on Wrigley's statement, which particularly stressed the owner's desire for a world championship team—nothing less.

Wrigley's statement:

"I realize that Joe McCarthy is one of baseball's best managers, but I must have a winner. I have always wanted a world's championship team, and I am not so sure that Joe McCarthy is the man to give me that kind of a team.

"I am going to call Joe in when the team gets back, and have a talk with him. I must have a winner, and if Joe cannot give it to me—well I must have a winner, that's all.

"I was sadly disappointed after the world series last year. I believe we should have won. I had a great team, a fighting team.

"Baseball is something like business. You have to be a leader in the field you are in, or you do not amount to anything, and you get nowhere.

FANS HONOR MCCARTHY

"Most any team can finish second, third or fourth, but it takes a real team to win a pennant, to finish first.

"I have set my mind on having the greatest team in either league in the next year or two, and to do that I must have a man at the head who can pilot it into that position."

A group of loyal McCarthy fans plan to honor the man who is about to step aside as the Cubs' manager Saturday.

PITT, CARNEGIE WORK FOR OPENERS

With five days of practice left before the first game of the season with Waynesburg Saturday in Pitt Stadium, Jock Sutherland, head coach of the University of Pittsburgh Panthers, has his work cut out for him.

In five days he must hold two scrimmage sessions and then decide on a starting lineup. And in the remaining three afternoons he must give the starting lineup a general polishing up for the opening game with the Yellow Jackets who may have more of a sting than was indicated by Saturday's last-minute loss to Slippery Rock.

Scrimmage sessions today and tomorrow should be the most spirited of the practice season to date. Four candidates for left half, three for fullback, three for one guard post, to say nothing of Eddie Hirschberg's determined bid for an end position, no doubt will insure a fight to the finish in these final scrimmages and should have the players on their toes for Saturday's game.

INELIGIBILITY HITS TECH

With their plans somewhat disorganized by the ineligibility of Howard Stauffer, Albin Myslenski, Kay Burns and Frank Flizack—all tackles—who yesterday were forced to withdraw from football because of certain academic deficiencies, Judge Steffen and Bob Waddell, Carnegie Tech coaches surprised their squad with a bit of Monday scrimmage.

This would seem to indicate that they are not entirely satisfied with the way the Tartans are moving less than a week before their opening game with Buffalo. The boys had their new uniforms on again yesterday but that did not deter the coaches from sending them into a short session of rough work. Rain fell and the handsome garb became soiled, but still the coaches drove their men, and the student managers had to sit up most of the night cleaning the soiled equipment.

While Steffen and Waddell are not unduly upset over the stories of Buffalo's strength that have been drifting into camp the last several days, they evidently believe that they are likely to run into a little stiffer opening day opposition than they had bargained for.

Buffalo is rather excited over next Saturday's contest, as it is homecoming day for the University. A supply of tickets that was sent to Graduate Manager Overend's office was recalled yesterday, indicating that there has been considerable demand for the pasteboards in Northern New York.

LAYDEN GIVES LECTURE

Coach Elmer Layden assumed a professional role on the Bluff yesterday as the Duke gridders reassembled following their setback in the opener against West Virginia last Friday. The former Notre Dame star delivered a long lecture with the aid of a blackboard and chalk, illustrating the various deficiencies which cropped up in the work of his proteges, and he needed plenty of chalk before he had reached the bottom of the list.

A further search for a successor to Buff Donnelli as the team's kicker was instituted as well. The Dukes were far from impressive in this end of the game in their opener and a valiant attempt to unearth a better booter is being made.

PRESIDENTS WORK

WASHINGTON, Pa., Sept. 23.—Minus the assistance of Pete Henry, who will be confined to his home for another week, Head Coach Bill Amos started yesterday to point W. & J. for its opening game here Saturday with Bethany.

Stew Wilson, varsity fullback, who suffered an injury last week, was in togs, but not in the scrimmaging.

Former Big League Stars at Charleroi

CHARLEROI, Sept. 23.—On Thursday afternoon the tenth annual baseball game of former big league stars will be played here.

Heading the galaxy of former stars who will be seen in action at 4 o'clock are Former Governor of Pennsylvania John K. Tener, John (Honus) Wagner, Bill Phillips, Deacon Phillipi, Jock Menefee, Bob Coulson, Ody Abbott, Willis Humphries, Gene Elliott, Albert Boucher and many others whose names at one time were found occupying the space now given to Babe Ruth, Hack Wilson and present stars of the diamond.

Little World Series To Open Tomorrow

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Twenty Louisville Colonels, champions of the American Association, left Louisville at 6:55 p. m., last night for Rochester, N. Y., where they will meet the Rochester team, champion of the International League, in the first game of the Little World Series tomorrow.

With the Louisville team went Allan Sothoron, manager; William Neal, vice president and general manager; Wathen Knebelkamp, secretary and five Louisville fans.

SHADY SIDE IN OPENER

Shady Side Academy opens its football season next Saturday with a game with Taylor Allderdice High School at home. Other dates are: October 3, Perry High at home; October 10, Catholic High at home; October 17, Oakmont High at home; October 24, St. Nicholas School at Buffalo; November 1, University School of Cleveland at home; November 7 or 8, pending.

Nick Altrock Says:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—I see they have got Joe McCarthy on the skids now. It wasn't his fault the Cubs collapsed, though. Wrigley's club would have won the pennant if its sticking average was as good as his gum's.

Nick Altrock

They say Hornsby will manage the team next year. That is the first time a player with a bad heel ever limped into a manager's berth. If the trick works with Rogers, I am going to show up at our training camp next season with the gout.

Well, folks, the season is about all over, but the American League really ought to establish a third division for the Red Sox next year.

RIVERSIDE GOLF EVENT OPENS

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

With every club in the district represented, the fifteenth annual invitation amateur tournament of the Riverside Golf Club, in Cambridge Springs, which opened its four-day affair with an 18-hole qualifying round today, bids well to be one of the largest and best tournaments of the season. Augmented by star Northwestern Pennsylvanians and Arthur "Ducky" Yates, former intercollegiate champion, it appears that the field of almost 300 will display some fireworks at the beautiful Riverside layout before a victor is decided.

CITY-COUNTY TOURNEY

Two other tourneys are on tap for today. The annual city-county tourney is being played at the Westmoreland Country Club with play slated all day. While public officials are cavorting the Westmoreland links, the Philadelphia Company will be staging its annual event at the Wildwood Country Club. A dinner is to follow this evening. The Philadelphia Company also has listed a girls' Tom Thumb tourney for the Schenley course at Forbes street, near Bouquet, for tomorrow night, beginning at 6:30. A dance is to follow the tourney.

AVETTA LEADS

Al Avetta took the lead in the first 18-hole round of the 36-hole medal play club championship test of the Hotel, Club and Restaurant Golf Association, at the Stanton Heights Golf Club yesterday, his tally of 78-4—74 being several strokes better than the 86-10—76 returned by Walter H. Mennigke, president of the group. P. P. Debold led the second division with 83-22—71. Rain interfered with the tourney. The last 18-hole round will be played at the St. Clair Country Club. Yesterday's scores:

FIRST DIVISION

Al Avetta, 78-4—74; W. H. Mennigke, 86-10—76; Billy Tavano, 93-12—81; Harry Bailey, 83-8—81; Pat Biggins, 87-5—82; John J. Dillon, 94-8—86; Ross Gammons, 99-8—91.

SECOND DIVISION

P. P. Debold, 93-22—71; Clif Brahme, 99-22—77; Ed Kimmick, 115-24—91; Withdrew, Louis F. Tesh, Otto Eberle, Tom Carey, Al G. Bauer, Jr., Anthony Cushing.

WOMEN PLAY

The Women's Golf Association of Western Pennsylvania staged its final one-day tournament of the season at the Oakmont Country Club yesterday, with a big field in the competition. An exceptionally large entry is anticipated for the two-day 36-hole medal play tourney Wednesday and Thursday of next week at the Riverside Golf Club, Cambridge Springs, according to Mrs. F. M. Sloan, of Edgewood, President.

DUCAT WINNERS IN CONTEST INCREASED

Here's good news for contestants in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's Pitt All-Time Team contest.

There were more successful contestants than appeared in the list of winners published in Sunday's issue. The names of 19 of the winners who guessed 10 of the players on the teams elected by Jeffers J. Long were inadvertently omitted, and four additional typewritten pages of winners who guessed six of the players have become to light. The 19 pick-players were included in Friday's totals, but the 120 pick-offs six players were not, so that, instead of 1,073 fans getting a ticket for the opening game with Waynesburg next Saturday, 1,193 will be on the list. This also raises the total of winners to 4,542.

Several letters have been received from contestants claiming their totals were wrongly checked. These are being double-checked and corrections will be made if they are in order.

COOPER SCORES 63 TO WIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—(AP.)—Lighthorse Harry Cooper, Chicago professional, chased old man par right off the Medinah Country Club golf course yesterday, raking the layout for an amazing 63, six under par, in the afternoon round of the club's $3,000 open event, for a 36-hole total of 136. Cooper carded a 73 on the number one course in the morning.

Back of Cooper came Leo Diegel of Agua Caliente, Mexico, with 140, while Horton Smith finished third with a pair of 71's. Gene Sarazen started poorly with a 78 for his morning round, but breezed in with a great 65 in the final 18 holes to tie with Laurie Ayton, of Evanston, Ill., for fourth with 143.

Whiffy Cox, of Brooklyn, and Bill Mehlhorn, of New York, tied for the next position with 144's, while Al Espinosa, of Chicago, had 145.

season for four consecutive years, the closest approach to Willie Keeler's record of eight straight seasons, was also accomplished once by an American League player.

The man to do it was Johnny Tobin, former outfielder of the St. Louis Browns. He made 202 hits in 1920, 236 in 1921, 207 in 1922, and 202 in 1923.

Welker Cochran

ANOTHER STAR OF balk-line billiards has been won over to the three-cushion game. Welker Cochrane, former world champion at 18.2, has taken up the angle style of play so seriously that he means to enter the next tournament for the title. And experts believe that he will have to be treated as a formidable contender, too, expressing the opinion that he is the most improved three-cushion player in the sport today. In his first test last January he defeated Willie Hoppe, 400 to 389, in 317 innings, and since that time he has continued to advance, surprising cue circles in Los Angeles recently by defeating Champion Johnny Layton, 300 to 290. Though he still likes balk-line, Cochran believes the public prefers angle competition. "Three-cushion billiards is a style of play that will make any one lose his good disposition if he ever had any," he says. "Why, even Willie Hoppe, once the king of poise, talks to himself when he misses in three cushions. It is hard on the nerves, but great for the spectators, and we must give the fans what they want."

Forbes

Knows How to Attract New Enterprises

By B. C. FORBES

Mr. Forbes

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 23.—Thirty-five distilleries used to flourish in and around Louisville, sending their products all over the world. Louisville had, too, the largest hogshead tobacco market in the world, from which went shipments to many countries.

The distilleries have gone. The hogshead tobacco market has all but gone.

Yet Louisville employes more people, enjoys greater prosperity, grows more rapidly than when its two main activities flourished.

How has it been done?

FIRST, LOUISVILLE'S location has helped. Raw materials can be brought advantageously from the South, processed and shipped to great Northern and Eastern markets, as well as to the South—Louisville is actually nearer Canada than it is Memphis. Six of the eight trunk railroads serving it start—or end—at Louisville.

Then, of increasing importance, it is on the Ohio River, whose canalization from Pittsburgh to Cairo was completed last year. The nine-foot stage created in the Ohio River by the Federal government makes possible year-round water transportation from Louisville to the Alleghenies on the North-East and to the Gulf on the South. The city also has access by water to St. Louis, Kansas City and other important markets on tributary streams.

The Eastern Kentucky, Western Kentucky and Southern Indiana coal fields are nearby, and cheap transportation of coal and petroleum from West Virginia and Eastern Kentucky fields is provided by waterway.

Moreover, in recent years Louisville has become an important power-producing center. The Louisville Gas and Electric Company, associated with the famous Byllesby organization, has been developed most aggressively under the management of Bert Wilson. The falls of Ohio have been skillfully harnessed to a 100,000-odd horsepower plant and important additions are under way at this moment.

SITUATED ONLY 90 miles from the center of population in the United States, practically half of the people in the entire country live within a 500-mile radius. Although this area is less than one-quarter of the country, Louisville has compiled statistics to show that within it are:

	per Cent
Individual income tax returns	41
Incomes $1,000 to $5,000	42
Bank savings deposits	40
Postal receipts	44
Families with telephones	44
Passenger automobiles registered	45
Domestic electric customers	42
Retail stores	45
Wholesale houses	40
Manufacturing establishments	42
Manufacturing wage earners	50
Farms	54
Total farm population	54

WHEN PROHIBITION came, more than 3,000 of Louisville's farsighted citizens, led by the Louisville Board of Trade, subscribed $1,100,000 to organize the Louisville Industrial Foundation to attract and promote industries.

In the last dozen years more than 200 industries have been established, many as a direct result, others as an indirect result, of the industrial foundation's extremely capably-managed activities. The money is used as a revolving fund to aid in financing new enterprises, and such sound business judgment has been exercised that the original fund is not only still intact, but a surplus has been earned.

LOUISVILLE HAS increased in population fully 31 per cent in the last 10 years (to 308,000), an extraordinary showing for a city which last year celebrated its one hundred fiftieth birthday.

I WOULD suggest that other cities learn exactly how the Louisville Industrial Foundation operates.

Cotton Ginnings Above Last Year

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—The Bureau of Census reports 3,729,683 running bales of cotton ginned from the growth of 1930, prior to September 16, 1930, as compared with 3,351,613 in the corresponding period last year and 2,500,781 in the similar 1928 time. These figures include 78,188 bales of the crop of 1930 ginned prior to August 1, which was counted in the supply for the season of 1929-30, compared with 86,974 and 88,761 bales of the crops of 1929 and 1928 respectively.

Daily Average Oil Production Gains

TULSA, Okla., Sept. 23.—Daily average production of crude oil in the United States during the week ended September 20 totaled 2,419,744 barrels, an increase of 2,737 barrels daily, according to Oil and Gas Journal.

Light oil output decreased 1,481 barrels daily in the week.

SHORT SELLING COMMODITIES DANGEROUS

Thompson-Starrett Head Sees Evil in Practice, Urges Clients to Buy

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Louis J. Horowitz, chairman of the board of the Thompson-Starrett Company and one of the most sagacious minds in the construction industry, thinks it is dangerous at this time to sell commodities short.

The contractor, like the pessimistic stock speculator, can in effect sell short when and if he thinks there will be a further decline in prices. The contractor agrees to erect a building, with definite specifications, at a given aggregate price, and has the choice either of covering up on his raw materials at once or waiting until he needs them. The contractor waits when he expects distinctly lower prices.

Mr. Rukeyser.

Mr. Horowitz said:

"We are advising our clients that the present subnormal market is distinctly favorable to the buyer. As many commodities are selling below the cost of production, the probabilities favor the assumption of prices going up rather than down. We are covering our raw materials as fast as definite specifications can be made ready, considering this the wisest policy from every standpoint."

BUY AHEAD

Mr. Horowitz, reading the economic signposts, comes to the same conclusion as the studious Bell Telephone group. Edgar S. Bloom, president of the Western Electric Company, it will be recalled, revealed last week that his group had bought up copper and certain other raw materials in anticipation of requirements for the next four months. There comes a time in every business reaction when some leaders think there is more hazard in waiting than in acting. It should be borne in mind, however, that both these gentlemen are buying against actual needs, and are not merely accumulating material for a speculative rise in the hope to find another buyer on whom to unload.

In the long term biology of business, recession as well as prosperity serves a purpose, though the medicine of correction is hard to take. In a more civilized and rational economic civilization of the future, however, it is to be hoped that co-ordinated planning will be substituted for the present anarchy in business, and that the good results will be achieved without the present terrific cost in unemployment and diverted productive power.

UTILITIES TO BENEFIT

Pointing to the good results from the depression, the president of one of the great public utility companies remarked to me:

"I believe the public utility business is going to benefit ultimately to a great degree from the slackening of industrial activity. When industrial corporations are going ahead at high speed, they cannot stop to revise their operations to take advantage of all the economies that are offered, but when manufacturing has slackened they have this opportunity and I believe most of the industrials are seeking to take advantage of cheap money rates and equip themselves for more efficient operation when activity is resumed."

Building Activity Gains in New York

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Contracts awarded for new construction in the metropolitan area of New York during the week ended September 19, totaled $28,932,200, F. W. Dodge Corporation reports. The figure brought the total for September to $57,636,200, a rate of $3,602,300 a business day, compared with a daily rate of $2,953,000 in August, and $2,310,700 in September last year. For the first time in months contracts for residential building were in the lead. For the year to date contracts awarded in the area total $715,702,200, compared with $885,312,300 in the like period last year.

Canadian Wheat Pool Cuts Prices

OTTAWA, Sept. 23.—The Canadian wheat pool has reduced initial payments on oats 5 cents a bushel to 25 cents, flax 25 cents to $1, and rye 5 cents to 35 cents. Barley is unchanged at 25 cents.

List Backs and Fills as Wheat Reaches Lowest in Years—Support Offered

NEW YORK, Sept. 23 (AP).—Stocks backed and filled irregularly today, while wheat was [illegible] at the lowest prices in years. Coppers and oils were indicated to her freely in this section, and new lows for the year in both groups were numerous.

However a brisk active demand for the market leaders brought moderate gains in the early afternoon. American Can, American Telephone and American Water Works rose 3 points or more. Bethlehem Steel, Westinghouse Electric, United Aircraft and Allied Chemical gained about 2 and U. S. Steel, Johns-Manville, National Biscuit, Atchison and North American rallied a point or more. In the copper group Anaconda, Kennecott, Andes, Calumet and Arizona and Calumet and Hecla made new lows while among the oils Standard of New York, Prairie Oil, Ohio Oil and Warner Quinlan sagged to new [illegible].

With German bonds rallying on the London and New York markets, professional bears were not disposed to make capital of the foreign situations that were the subject of rumor and gossip yesterday. A fair inquiry for American stocks by European buyers was reported.

Weakness of the copper shares was based on unfavorable dividend prospects. Although most of the large companies have already sharply curtailed payments to stockholders—several have cut more than once this year—further reductions are generally expected. Some leading producers have cut prices to 10½ cents a pound for the remainder of the year and numerous prominent consumers are understood to have taken care of their requirements for the next two or three months, leaving the outlook for the industry rather gloomy.

BANK LOANS

Routine business news offered little that could be called encouraging in speculative circles where pessimism is so popular. The weekly bank statement reported a $3,000,000 drop in commercial loans, although there was a gain of $14,000,000 in this item in the New York Federal Reserve District. August income statements from the railroads disclosed declines from the same month a year ago in about the proportions that have been prevailing. An adjusted index of automobile production for last week showed a small decline from the previous week, although changes in the chart since the first of this month have been so small as to be virtually negligible.

The familiar 2 per cent call money renewal rate was posted on the stock exchange but accommodations were liberally offered outside at 1½.

Sugar Market.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Raw sugar was quiet early today, but the undertone was a little easier with spot prices 1 point lower at 3.14c. Sales reported as of late yesterday included at least 44,000 bags of Cuban for prompt shipment at 3.15c and 7,000 bags of Philippines due early next month at 3.11c.

The withdrawal demand for refined sugar was again of liberal proportions with prices unchanged at 4.35 to 4.45c for fine granulated.

Nickel Plate Railroad's Outlook for 1930 Held Poor

New York, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad probably will show less than $3 a share earned on 337,087 common shares this year. [illegible] takes to some extent [illegible] toward the end of the year [illegible] of the year's earnings [illegible] Nickel Plate has [illegible] Wheeling [illegible] Lake Erie [illegible] months [illegible] Dakota [illegible] a $4-a-share annual rate. Since Wheeling probably will show earnings for the year equal to about $30 a share on its prior lien stock, it is possible the road will declare a special dividend toward the end of the year on its prior lien stock sufficient to enable Nickel Plate to show its common dividend earned for the year. A dividend of $10 a share on Wheeling prior lien stock would be equal to $3.42 a share on Nickel Plate common, since Nickel Plate holds 115,193 Wheeling prior lien shares.

American and Foreign Power sold off rather precipitately yesterday coincident with the appearance of its earning statement covering the 12 months ended June 30, last. Net for that period was $37,269,000 against $23,502,000 in the previous corresponding period. But after unusually heavy write-off this year, including provision for preferred dividends, the balance for the common stock was but $4,300,355 as against $5,104,060 the year before. Preferred dividends for the 1929 period called for $23,400,190 against $15,975,775 a year ago. Representing as it does about half the total investment of Electric Bond and Share, weakness in Foreign Power was reflected in the shares of the parent company on the curb.

For a number of years Penick & Ford has been following the practice of retiring its senior obligations. As a result it is considered probable that within a year, or slightly more the capital structure of the company will consist entirely of common stock. The company is one of the few which was able to make a good showing in the first six months when earnings before federal taxes were $1,001,032, compared with $950,317 in the corresponding period of 1929. Good progress in increasing its volume of business has been reported and the company's products are said to be gaining in popularity.

The so-called big interests, or banking interests, are doing very little in the market. One of the "big interests" said that stocks were taking care of themselves and that concerted support was not necessary. "In the meantime," he added, "we will have a fluctuating market influenced by the trend of trade news. We simply have to have a little patience. Things will right themselves in time. They have been righting themselves since last November."

Levels at which it was believed leading stocks were likely to meet good resistance, and at which support was only moderate, were broken easily when selling became persistent and general. Bear traders probably realized that by breaking the market through such points they could bring increased liquidation into the general list. Such efforts previously had not been highly successful, but the market apparently was in a more vulnerable condition last week, for downward movements continued even when rather active short covering developed.

When stocks broke through previous resistance levels on the up side recently, with a larger volume of dealings, the feeling became general that the market had come out of its rut and indicated that it would make further advances. But the upturn was halted rather abruptly, and stocks went down easily. Naturally, those who purchased on the theory that the market had foreshadowed a further recovery, have been sellings on stops in the last few sessions.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Liverpool rates were lower than expected and the New York Cotton Exchange Service issued a statement indicating that last season's total crop will probably exceed 15,000,000 bales. The trade demand however was again very active and the market was held within comparatively narrow limits.

Late December declined 7 points to 10.18 while March was down 8 points to 11.07. Liverpool cabled that the market there was influenced by hedging and local Bombay liquidation, but added that there were moderate cash sales to South America and Africa and that yarn stocks were decreasing.

The rebuttal hotting report showing the amount of cotton ginned to September 15 to have been 3,729,681 bales was apparently smaller than anticipated and after a slight further decline the cotton market rallied in continued trade buying and covering. The amount of southern ceiling also fell off and with less pressure from that source the market responded rather easily to even moderate buying.

October ended unchanged to 10.68c or 2 points above the previous finals while March was up to 11.16c a net gain of 3 points. New buying was of rather small volume but it was believed that the show of strength in response to pressure had brought about some short covering. At midday the market was steady at 2 points lower to 2 points net higher.

Hogate Suggests Aid To Business

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

A NEW SUGGESTION TO SPEED industry on its way to recovery was made last week. It followed a large number of proposals for keeping business on an even keel but it may be numbered among the few ideas which seem to have practical merit.

Kenneth C. Hogate, vice-president and general manager of Dow, Jones & Company, publishers of the Wall Street Journal, told members of the Cleveland Stock Exchange at the opening of their new quarters, that unemployment would be relieved and business stimulated if corporations would distribute their surpluses to the stockholders to whom they belong.

To hold large surpluses at a time of business emergency is to stand in the way of a revival of activity, in Mr. Hogate's opinion. Attention was called to the fact that when the speculative boom was at its peak a year ago the brokers' loan account showed about $4,000,000,000 for the account of "others." Most of this, he stated, was placed there by corporations in order to avail themselves of the high rates then prevailing for call money. When the crash came the money was withdrawn, but it was not distributed to the stockholders.

Make the Dollars Work

ON THE THEORY THAT A DOLLAR in an individual's hands is made to work much harder than in the surplus account of a corporation, Mr. Hogate called upon our many strongly entrenched organizations to add to the nation's purchasing power by putting their idle money into stockholders hands to be spent in the thousands of ways which ultimately will add to sales, production and profits of industry in general.

This attitude is based on the belief that there cannot be a revival of business activity until the spending power of consumers is increased. Money has been cheap but it has not provided a sufficient stimulant to business. Capital and labor must receive their wages but these come only through the sale of goods and services. But goods and services are not in demand unless individuals have ready cash.

Hugging Surplus Cash

THE CONDITION UPON WHICH Mr. Hogate commented results from a policy which has become a fetish of the managements of some corporations. The elimination of indebtedness, the retirement of preferred stocks, the accumulation of cash reserves to provide financial structures immune from any business shock are laudable objects. It is the duty of mangements to provide this insurance against bad times. But all things can be overdone.

Such conservative policies are to the advantage of stockholders if they are not carried to such a point that cash reserves become larger than the business is ever likely to need. The building up of reserves can easily become pure miserliness which robs stockholders of profits to which they are entitled and robs the country of purchasing power which could be given it without any loss of strength to the corporations which earned the money.

Extra Dividends Passed

DURING THE PAST three years many well managed corporations have earned dividend requirements several times over. Where financial positions are strong there is no reason why dividend payments should be curtailed because of the current depression.

Pittsburgh has been fortunate in having several corporations which have shown no declines or only moderate declines in profits this year. Some of these organizations have helped business by declaring extra dividends. Other strong companies, less fortunate in this year's profits, have shown the courage to continue regular payments even at the expense of dipping into surplus.

There have been exceptions as well. One company earned as much in the first six months of this year as in the corresponding period of last year. Third quarter profits will show a slight decline. The company has enormous cash resources and is free of debt. In spite of this, however, the extra dividend was omitted at the last meeting of directors even though it was earned. This is a brand of conservatism which is harmful, not helpful, to business.

Conservatism has its place in management but business also needs some of the courage advocated by Mr. Hogate.

DAILY TRUE STORY

Didn't Get Away

"Well, sir, he struck in that pool just below the old log bridge. I knew he was a beauty by the way he started off with it and—"

"What fly were you using, Professor?" Pop Eastman asked.

"Silver coachman. When he leaped I could see that he was a two-pounder on a fair estimate. Well sir, I got him within a couple feet of the net twice and each time he took a new lease of life and made another dash. Finally he worked up to the bridge where those old logs are and found a place to snap the line."

"Tch—tch—a shame," Pop Eastman agreed. "A shame to have him get away like that, professor, although you have taken the best catch out of the stream thus far this season."

Prof. Alton Dinsmore agreed. He was well pleased with his day's catch, indeed.

"They say there's always the biggest fish that gets away. Perhaps they're right. I was tempted to—somehow I have to loose them like that."

Shelia Ridley stood in the pantry door a very neat 16, getting ready for supper. She stood so that she could glance at Prof. Dinsmore whenever she looked up.

Shelia had been glancing at Prof. Dinsmore every time like this for three seasons.

She liked to glance at him. She wished she could sit down with him and talk. But the professor seemed to be extraordinarily afraid of women, especially of attractive young women.

Shelia was attractive and young.

Every summer she came up from the city where she taught school and made herself useful on her Uncle Tom's place. Her Uncle Tom was known to scores of ardent trout fishermen simply as "Pop" Eastman.

Afraid of Women

Pop provided wonderful meals, good beds and valuable advice to all of his patrons. Now and then a tin-horn sport or a cad or a roller would come up and pretend to be a fisherman, but he never found accommodations after that.

Most of his guests were splendid types of men, the majority of them being in the 40-year class.

Prof. Dinsmore was one of the younger ones. He had been coming up there since he was 20, which was 10 years ago. Three years before, when Shelia's uncle invited her to come up for the summer, she had no more than arrived and made her uncle and aunt understand that unless she could work around with them she wouldn't remain, before Prof. Dinsmore came.

He didn't seem to be so very much afraid of Mrs. Eastman. Elderly and motherly matrons didn't seem to bother him. But when he was introduced to Shelia by Pop, he stammered and drew back and acted as though he thought she would bark at him.

This amused Shelia at first.

The professor always remained through June and July.

By the time June has passed the professor's apparent fear of her ceased to amuse. It annoyed her.

Shelia had fallen in love with him.

Shelia, of the quiet ways, the intelligent eyes and the warm smile, who taught very young boys and girls the rudiments of learning in a city public school, and who never did have much use for the male of the human race between the ages of 10 and 60, was aghast when she realized that she loved this quiet Prof. Dinsmore.

During the second season she remained hopeful that she could break down Prof. Dinsmore's barrier of reserve.

She did not.

He bowed politely, he spoke briefly, but kindly, and he edged away timidly if Shelia chanced to come along on the big veranda and sit near him.

Pop Eastman admired the professor.

"He's a smart—he's awful smart," he told Shelia.

"A chemist who writes text books and invents chemical compounds and makes a lot of money, and gets to be regarded as an authority before he is 30, has to be smart, Uncle Tom," Shelia reminded him.

Smart Fisherman

"Bosh! That's book learnin.' I mean he's smart with a fly rod. He knows what flies to use for every kind of weather and he can come back with a mess of trout on days when others have fished the stream ahead of him and got no more'n two or three. That takes a smart man."

And here he was again, this third season—back again at Pop Eastman's chatting like an intelligent human with Pop and making a record catch his very first day—but he never would glance over and smile at poor Shelia.

When he arrived he had nodded at Shelia in an embarrassed manner.

"Ah, how do you do, Miss Ridley," he had said.

"I'm always well, Professor—how is it with you?"

"Er — Oh — er — the same," he stammered and backed away.

Shelia went back to her duties, helping her aunt, and her pretty lips were in a thin straight line while wrinkles furrowed her handsome brow.

Why couldn't he have shaken hands? Why couldn't he have smiled and told her that it was good for sore eyes to see her and that she grew more and more beautiful each year?

Most of the others did who came there regularly for fishing, but the others didn't matter in the least. Most of them were 40 or more, married, and just saying something to the pretty Shelia to be pleasant.

So Shelia studied Prof. Dinsmore slyly as he talked with her uncle. To her way of thinking, he was better looking than ever. Why couldn't he be friendly with her? Given half a chance she would just make him love her, but what could a girl do when the young man seemed afraid that she would suddenly devour him or destroy him if he came too near to her or if he smiled at her or said an affectionate word to her?

No one ever could produce such a fine dinner Mrs. Eastman as this—no one except yourself," he said.

Shelia looked down at her plate.

"That's right nice of you," Perfessor," Mrs. Eastman said, "but I didn't have nary a finger in this meal. Shelia did it all."

"Er—indeed—ahem—quite nice Miss Ridley. I should say most excellent," he stammered.

Pop Eastman grinned and winked at Shelia.

Determined Girl

"Land saves Perfessor, we don't put on airs—we don't scarcely know who you mean, saying Miss Ridley. Shelia is just Shelia to us, we couldn't get along, summers, without Shelia."

"Indeed er—" Prof. Dinsmore turned very red. He looked at Pop. "When do you expect the square-tails to rise in Mill Pond, Pop?"

Pop told him.

Shelia sat by the window in her room that night and planned plans. Shelia was a go-getter. She never wanted anything that wasn't worth while, but she generally went after and got what she wanted.

Wanting a man like Prof. Dinsmore was a real problem, but she did want him and she was determined to get him.

She had two whole months ahead of her. If she couldn't make Prof. Dinsmore say more than "Er—ahem Miss Ridley," in two months, then she would be a failure.

The professor decided to try Durkee brook the next day. This was a tributary to the big stream and ran through Pop Eastman's upper pasture and lower meadow.

The professor went down to start up stream.

Shelia took a pail and started for the upper end of the meadows. There were late wild strawberries there—enough for a short cake.

She filled the small pail and sat down to wait.

Prof. Dinsmore came up stream, casting up and letting the fly float down. Shelia was hidden until he passed. Then she came to the narrow stream and watched.

The dry fly came floating down beneath some overhanging alders. Shelia grasped the leader and started to hook the fly into the edge of her shoe. She was going to scream that he had hooked her.

It didn't quite work out that way. Just as she started to fasten the feathered hook into the edge of her shoe the professor, unaware of her presence, whipped back his rod to start to reel in for a further advance upstream and another cast.

The hook, instead of catching in her shoe, darted upward and fastened itself just above her knee.

Shelia grasped the leader and screamed. It wasn't any fake scream—the thing hurt.

Prof. Dinsmore came hurrying down in his wading boots, pushing the alders aside and scowling, because something had interrupted his fishing and frightened the trout.

He stood and gaped at Shelia.

Her face suddenly became very red.

Cut Dressed

"I—I was sitting on the bank—the hook—it hurts," she managed to say.

"Why—why, this is terrible—I'm so sorry, Miss Ridley," he stammered.

"Please be sorry enough to help me. I can't get it out."

He gently placed his rod on the ground, with slacked line, and went to her.

There was the fly hook in her leg just above where her stocking was rolled down, with a few drops of blood about the wound.

"You'll have to cut it out, I'm afraid."

He opened his leather case of flies and leaders, produced a thin razor blade and a bottle of iodine. He lighted a match under the table, then poured iodine on it.

"That's sterilized sufficiently, Miss Ridley—"

"Oh, call me Shelia and hurry—it hurts," she said, smiling at him.

"I'll have to pinch your—I'll have to pinch to—er——"

"Pinch away," she said.

He did pinch, and he made just a tiny cut and out came the hook.

"You darling, you didn't hurt a bit—and for that I'm going to——"

She grabbed him and kissed him.

He stared at her a moment and suddenly he laughed and returned the kiss.

He insisted on going home with her to properly dress the cut.

They came across the front yard, arms about each other.

"Land sakes," said Ma Eastman.

"Here's a beauty, Pop—that didn't get away," Prof. Dinsmore called out, as he boldly hugged Shelia.

NEW YORK.—Major Charles P. Shinn, of 862 East 34th st., Brooklyn, president of the Kings County Grand Jurors' Association, has won his fight for his right as a motorist to talk back to a traffic policeman.

Big Idea Department

Sir:

If Commissioner Woodcock is really serious about training his agents to pretend they're gentlemen, it seems to me their behavior in the routine matter of stopping motorists to ask for a drink should be called to his attention. Due to a lack of conveniences, it is the habit of dry officers in such situations to drink directly from the bottle. Which immediately classifies them, in the mind of the sophisticated motorist, as boors. My theory is that a great deal of tone might be added to the service by equipping all prohibs on highway work with a service kit containing charged water, ginger ale, limes, lemons, oranges, vermouth, a cocktail shaker, ice, assorted glasses, and a bar towel.

Very truly yours,

Pittsburgh's Right Arm Should Be Strengthened

The Monongahela River has been called Pittsburgh's left arm, and the Allegheny its right arm. The annual convention of the Allegheny River Improvement Association, to be held in Franklin tomorrow, is a reminder that our right arm is weaker than our left, and that efforts are being made to strengthen it.

In the volume of its traffic the Monongahela is a giant among inland waterways. Yet there is reason to believe that with the same degree of development the Allegheny would be an even mightier carrier of freight.

The Allegheny is a longer stream with greater volume of water, and the natural resources of the Allegheny Valley are superior to those of the Monongahela. The Monongahela Valley is rich in coal, but the Allegheny not only has vast coal deposits, but almost unlimited quantities of limestone, fire clay, glass sand, building stone and other important commodities. The valley yields oil and gas, and glacial sand and gravel.

Years ago there was an iron works at Brady's Bend on the Allegheny, which obtained all of its raw materials from a farm nearby—its coal, its iron ore, its limestone for fluxing. Some of the rails used in the Allegheny Valley Railroad were made there.

If navigation had been developed on the Allegheny as early as on the Monongahela, the Allegheny, by reason of its superior natural resources, probably would have got many of the steel mills and other manufacturing plants that now line the banks of the Monongahela, and Pittsburgh's right arm would have been the more important from the industrial standpoint.

But the first dam in the Allegheny—that at Twenty-second street—was not built until 1893, and progress since then has been rather slow. The Allegheny is now navigable to Kittanning. Dams Nos. 7 and 8, under construction above Kittanning, may be completed this year, which will extend slackwater to Rimerton, 61 miles above Pittsburgh.

Congress has not as yet authorized the improvement of the river above Rimerton. The Allegheny should be made navigable at least as far as Olean, N. Y., to which steamboats have been known to ascend in times of high water.

Now that the Ohio has been given a nine foot stage throughout its length the local interests that worked so hard for the improvement should continue working for the improvement of the Allegheny.

Much Hinges on Outcome Of Bus Fare Struggle

The fight for the abolition of the 25-cent fare will be resumed before the Public Service Commission tomorrow. The struggle for motor coach transportation at a reasonable price is in its second year. The Allied Boards of Trade, backed only by members with a strong community spirit and by general public approval, have been opposing one of the largest public utility organizations with operations stretching from coast to coast and with millions of dollars at its command.

It has taken courage to enter a contest against such a formidable opponent. The Allied Boards are deserving of the thanks and the support of the people of Pittsburgh for taking up this important question which has been dodged by other civic bodies.

The commission's decision will be more than a mere answer to the question of whether residents along existing bus lines will pay 25, 15 or 10 cents to ride to work in the future. Changes in the transportation industry indicate that the day of the expansion of street railway systems has come to an end. The future development of street transportation will be undertaken with buses.

The commission will decide whether Pittsburgh's expansion will be helped by new lines charging equitable fares or whether growth will be strangled by allowing a 25-cent bus monopoly to continue.

As the extent of Pittsburgh's suburban area increases the bus fares will be increasingly important, since it is these lines that will serve the new communities.

Valuable Citizen Lost In Stevenson's Death

William H. Stevenson's unexpected death will be felt acutely in many groups and organizations concerned with the betterment of the city, the state and the nation. He was an indefatigable worker whose enthusiasm never waned, and it is to be hoped that the many praiseworthy causes in which he was interested will not suffer too severely from his passing.

Take the proposed Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal as an example. Mr. Stevenson had been campaigning for this project for a lifetime. Some who were associated with him in the campaign at the outset lost interest or were discouraged by the difficulties that had to be overcome—for as soon as obstacles were beaten down new ones were raised. But Mr. Stevenson never lost heart, never became tired. And it was the same in the other causes into which he threw himself.

Pittsburgh owes a great deal to Mr. Stevenson. He had much to do with the cleansing of the Augean stables of our municipal politics at a time when graft was rampant and the City Council composed largely of bribe-takers. In recent years he has been, perhaps, most useful through his work to increase appreciation of local history.

A genial, courteous gentleman, Mr. Stevenson's passing will be mourned by multitudes.

All May Learn Something From Jewish New Year

For Jews the world over a new year, the 5,691st since the Creation, began today. Celebration of the holiday, known as Rosh Hashonah, was ushered in with services in the synagogues last evening.

To the Jews of the Pittsburgh district the Sun-Telegraph extends its wishes for their happiness during the ensuing year.

Gentiles as well as Jews can learn something of value from study of the Rosh Hashonah observance. It offers a model from which many could find improvement for the manner in which they are wont to observe New Year's Day on January 1.

How much better off many people would be if, instead of starting the new year with revelry which for some takes the form of carousing, they would concern themselves with the inner life of the spirit, give thought to the errors and achievements of the past year, and resolve that in the ensuing twelvemonth their life would be richer in the nobler things of the mind. The Rosh Hashonah observance has an inspiring effect.

Lawful Disorder?

Justice seems to have as much chance with the racketeers as Peck's bad boy would have against the Macedonian phalanx.

Equity simply meant that you must come into court with clean hands. Now you can wear gloves. And have dirty pockets.

In a city not so far from the business end of the wharf we find that you can purchase yourself a neat form-fitting seat on the bench and strike terror into the hearts of the Boy Scouts.

You don't have to know any more about law than a fly does about window cleaning. That's one thing we like about the English courts. They put robes and wigs on their judges and disguise 'em.

We always thought that attempting to tamper with American law would be more dangerous that trying to gargle your throat with a cloudburst. But it seems that the racketeers have put the dog-collar on the lion.

The public doesn't seem to realize the situation until it rents a lawyer by the day and tries to grab itself a handful of legal oil.

But then, the good old public never tumbles to anything until the wolf has bitten the doorknob off the front door.

Like a pig in a sausage, it doesn't know the shape it's in.

We admit that the finger of suspicion ain't the whole hand. But a lot of politicians are beating raps that would have stymied the great Houdini.

Bribery is an ugly word. But it's beautiful when you get it.

We concede that every once in a while a reform administration gets into office and makes it worse.

And whenever there is a house-cleaning no investigators are allowed near the garage.

There is something rotten in a country much nearer than Denmark. And in the catalog of political odors a piece of cheese is a ready reference library.

Justice is blindfolded while her temple is being used as a landing field by rodents that can see in the dark. We know she is no gypsy whose palm can be crossed with silver. That's what we hope.

But it begins to look as if all the boll weevils aren't in cotton.

THE FUTURE OF THE DIRIGIBLE

By Archibald Henderson

The specific accomplishments of the Graf Zeppelin and the R-100 during the past year promise to give great impetus to airship construction. It is a mighty achievement to make a non-stop flight of some 7,000 miles, at an average speed of some 70 miles an hour. It is a memorable feat to circle the globe in 21 days of elapsed time, with only 12 days of actual flight. Japan and America are now within "three days' distance" of each other. In the near future, we may confidently expect London and Montreal to be within two days' distance of each other.

Leading authorities, such as Dr. Hugo Eckener and Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics of the U. S. Navy Department, were pronounced in their view that the airship is destined to be the great long-distance over-water carrier of the future. The great trans-oceanic air lines of the future will be traversed by airships. Gaps in the routes, especially along great stretches of shoreline, will be filled by airplane travel.

Questions of economy likewise will play an important if not a controlling role in a determination of the cheapest maximum cruising radius for airplanes, which will be the minimum for airships. Admiral Moffett feels inclined to set this figure at about 2,000 miles.

The best engineering authorities, it appears, advise the building of dirigibles considerably larger than either the Graf Zeppelin or the R-100. No airship large enough for trans-oceanic commercial travel has yet been constructed. Greater size means greater stability; and furthermore, by greatly increasing the accommodation space for passengers, will definitely place this new type of trans-continental and trans-oceanic air travel upon a sound commercial basis. In the not far distant future, mileage cost upon airships will be brought within the reach of at least the well-to-do, and will not be confined merely to the very rich.

Larger airships will bring greatly increased speed of travel. Distance is no longer the determinating factor in air travel; it has been displaced by speed of locomotion. Separation between geographical points is estimated nowadays, not in terms of distance, but in terms of transport time. To paraphrase Einstein, time is eating up space. Within a few years, airship speeds will doubtless be increased at least fifty per cent.

The great hindrance to the development of airship travel and transport is the danger from fire, destruction by explosion. The public has a comprehensible dread of inflammable gases. Hydrogen filled envelopes are a constant menace. This obstacle may be, and doubtless soon will be removed, by the general use of non-inflammable helium. The United States is particularly fortunate in having enormous helium resources, which may readily be made available for commercial use.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

There are many poor people who don't want to be helped. If you told them this, however, they would deny it indignantly. Each one would say:

"Of course I want to be helped! I'm sick of living like this. I hate this ramshackle house—this poor food—these shabby clothes. It's terrible to live like this, hopeless, discouraged, not amounting to anything. I'd give anything to live in a decent house with everything nice. If I could only get the breaks, I'd show you."

That's what every poor person on earth would say if you told them that they didn't want to be helped. And they would probably add bitter words about Capital keeping them down—and envious words about the superior luck of other people.

You know, for you've heard them say these very things, haven't you? And the chances are that you've believed them and hustled around to help. Particularly if, as often happens, they happen to be your own relations. You've found jobs for Dad and Sis—you've bought Junior a new school suit—you've given Ma a new stove and a set of aluminum ware. Perhaps you've even moved the whole gang into nicer quarters, with pretty new furniture and a pantry filled with groceries. And then what happened? Then, may be, you were rewarded by seeing them make good, as they had said they would. Sometimes it happens. Let's hope it happened to you. BUT IT'S DOLLARS TO DOUGHNUTS IT DIDN'T! For the chances are that, before second rent day came around, you found out that the first line of this article was true:—

They DIDN'T want to be helped! In spite of their pitiful pleas and proud boasts, they really preferred their original estates—and you weren't doing them any favor by thrusting that new deal upon them!

Dad threw up his job after 10 days and Sis was fired in a couple of weeks. They weren't "going to let anyone work 'em like dogs." Within a month, the new furniture looked like a fire sale. Ma wasn't going to "slave her life away over a kitchen stove and spend her days shut up in a stuffy apartment." In fact, by this time, Ma had probably acquired a grouch because you hadn't supplied her with a maid and a town car. And the new clothes—they were ready for the rag picker. For neither Ma nor Sis were ever "any hand with a needle."

In short, though they wanted the advantages of the new deal, they didn't want the responsibility and restraint that went with those advantages. They liked pretty clothes, regular meals, but they liked far, far better, the luxury of their old idleness and laziness and irresponsibility. They wanted the status of respectable members of the community. They were mad and sore because they didn't have it. But when it came to acquiring those habits of industry, promptness, system, tidiness, orderliness and reliability upon which social respect is found—THEY PREFERRED TO BE GYPSIES.

Why are so many lives down at the heels? Because, in spite of what they say—THAT'S THE LIFE THEY LIKE.

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

There's a great big church being built in New York, and it's been going up for a good many years, and naturally there's been some arguments about whether it was being done right. Some folks has got pretty bitter about it, and quite a few has called one another hypocrites, which I don't suppose any of them is by rights. But people love to get even with a high churchman by calling him a hypocrite.

Well, there is an architect that is kinda interested in this big church. He was talking to one of the ladies of the congregation at a social affair not long ago.

"Have you been over to the church job lately?" she says.

"Well, yes," he says. "I did stroll over last Sunday afternoon to see the great nave—"

He was about to go right on telling about how beautiful he thought the nave was going to be when it was finished, but this here lady interrupted him:

"You're right! He is a great knave, and that's a good name for him, only I been calling him things that don't sound so good. But he is a knave and a hypocrite, and I hope he'll be canned off the job before long!"

The Seeker

I am the seeker who never tires,
Though long are the years of my quest,
For the beckoning hand of my far desires
Leaves no thought of aught else in my breast.

Oh, the vision gleams like a star by night
And glows like a sun by day,
And always I grope through this lesser light
Toward the glory so far away!

I am the seeker who knows no lack,
Though my fare is a scanty crust,
With no roof for my rest, with no coat for my back
As I trudge through the rain or the dust.

I am the seeker with lifted brow,
Dweller in realms afar,
Untouched by the cares of here and now
And vowed to another star.

All the pains of living pass me by,
And the pomp of living palls;
I am the seeker. From on high
The vision glows and calls!

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

SEC. 7. FAILURES TO VARY AND EXTINCTION.

Some of the more ardent followers of Darwin went a good deal further than the master. Natural selection made it unnecessary to do as Paley did, and ascribe every adaptation to the direct agency of the Deity; but they proceeded to make a deity of Natural Selection. Weismann, for example, went so far as to maintain what he called "The Omnipotence of Natural Selection."

Such exaggeration gave excellent occasion to the antagonists of Darwinism. But, as a matter of fact, few naturalists failed to realize at any time that the action of natural selection is a limited one. It is limited both by the quality of the variations supplied to it.

H. G. Wells

Every case of extinction of a species is a failure to provide the variations which could have been used to meet and overcome the circumstances which were leading the species downhill. Sometimes we can see precisely what was lacking.

The Great Bustard, for instance, that magnificent bird which once nested commonly enough in East Anglia, has now disappeared from almost all of Northwestern Europe. The cause seems to lie in its excessive instinct of wariness. It leaves its eggs readily at the sight of man, and refuses to return to them so long as he is still in view.

The result is that as soon as cultivation invades its haunts, the hen bustard is so often and so long off her eggs that they grow addled. If some mutation had but arisen to reduce this inherited cautiousness, the bird could have survived longer—perhaps long enough to reap the advantages of the modern sentiment in favor of bird protection.

As it was, the species cut its own throat by its shyness, and the saving grace of the right mutation never appeared.

The Great Auk, on the other hand, was doomed by its inveterate tameness. This bird had next to no fear of man and was massacred by sailors for food and oil in such number that it became wholly extinct during the nineteenth century.

Could but a fraction of the Bustard's shyness of temperament have been granted to a few Great Auks, selection could have preserved them, and in them the species.

In many other cases we cannot put our finger so accurately on the cause of extinction. We know that when the brown rat, disseminated by trade, spread over Western Europe, the indigenous black rat quickly fell on evil days and was in many places brought to extinction on land (though it survived by taking to a life aboard ship).

But we do not know what failed the black rat in the struggle, what variation would have saved it. Nor do we know why, of the different kinds of Zebra, Burchell's and Grevy's should have survived the opening-up of Africa, while the Quagga became extinct. Our absence of detailed knowledge does not, however, make the principle less cogent.

One species or one group becomes extinct, another in the same conditions survives. The former could have escaped its doom if its germ-plasm could have produced the right variations and produced them with sufficient speed—but it did not.

This leads us at once to ask whether some species or whole groups may not be much less prone to vary than others; unfortunately, we cannot as yet answer this with any certainty. It is often asserted that highly specialized creatures, such as elephant or ant, fully evolved trilobite or dinosaur, lack the power of variation.

This, however, seems to rest upon a misapprehension.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Broadway's underworld believes: The silent live longer! Garrulity is supposed inevitably to end with the quick bark of a pistol. Yet three of the tightest-lipped racketeers moving furtively in the Tenderloin shadows were assassinated.

Arnold Rothstein was a paragon of reticence. Even with intimates, he was monosyllabic, enigmatic. No one had his confidence, and in public he always sat with back to the wall—a bodyguard nearby. "They plugged me through the guts," he gasped in the ambulance—but never revealed identity of "they."

Frankie Marlowe was similarly silent. So was the dapper Harry Block. Yet their uncommunicative tongues were further stilled by ambush shots. Indeed their skulking taciturnity seemed to attract attention. To inspire a gangland horror they knew too much!

Al Capone appears continually talking. And lives. Most gangsters are swaggering braggarts, and, considering their enormous number, a small percentage meet violent deaths. The killings are rarely courageous. The victim is usually trapped alone—peppered with machine bullets from a speeding car.

In other gangland days, toughs met by appointment and shot it out from both hips. They were not primed with dope and booze but got drunk afterward in celebration. Kit Twist, Humpty Jackson, Big Jack Zelig, Spanish Johnny, Little Augie and all the rest were gangsters, but not sneaks.

Bootleg racketeers generally get their man, but one escaped recently. He was in a basement speakeasy when he received one of those grapevine messages to duck. He did not stop for baggage but went directly to Grand Central and waited for the first train westward. He was last heard from in Singapore.

The murderous gangster has strong home ties and a misty-eyed sentimentality for wife, children and parents. In the Sweet Papa Belt he is distinguished for his profligacy and helping a pal. He has been influenced by the Broadway credo work is for saps.

Gallipolis, O., which was glorified in "The Easiest Way," chisels a break in Kenyon Nicholson's corking drama "Torch Song." On Lexington avenue a cafe, bless its enterprising little heart, advertises: "Your coffee will be served along with your meals here without the slightest argument."

And right in the midst of this a visitor drops in and apropos of nothing whatever remarked that no dish tastes so elegant as a left over bowl of creamed peas from the icebox at midnight. And it took a large-sized desk blotter to mop up the drool.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

You wish you had some of the money-making traits of some of your friends.

In your opinion you must be like them to succeed.

But when you strive to follow their methods you realize that you do not think in just the same way, and you make a failure trying to copy methods.

Don't try to win out by the route of another.

Get all the facts in the case and think out a way more characteristic of yourself and consequently understandable to yourself.

Few minds track exactly the same way.

You think you know your successful friend's method.

But you don't—not in its entirety—and he could not tell you what to do.

Perhaps he has an uncanny judgment.

Subconsciously he arrives at conclusions and works things out.

You only see the surface results and cannot see the steps of thought.

There is always a little something not accounted for when you try to do exactly as another has done for a goal.

You have ability and hard work is what you need, not a constant watching of the other fellow to try to solve his methods.
